We've Got What It Takes

Some 40 years ago, McNeese Junior College offered a handful of two-year programs to its several hundred students. Many of these students hitch-hiked from what is now "old" Lake Charles down a narrow road named Ryan Street to a campus of only a few buildings. Dean Lether Frazar led a small faculty who, in turn, led our parents along the road of higher education. "Tom and Mac's," the "Hob-Knob," and Prien Park were the local hot spots. Students swam every summer in the rice canals south of town.

Over the decades, McNeese has changed. What was once a vacant rice field has become a center of academic excellence in the heart of Southwest Louisiana. Today it is "the fastest growing university in the state." The Deacons, Gradale, and the Newman Club have been replaced by national social fraternities and professional organizations. No one hitch-hikes down a congested Ryan Street in 1985, and the rice canals have been replaced by an indoor-outdoor Olympic-size swimming pool which is usable year round. University programs now number in the hundreds, and thousands of students are led by dynamic faculty who prepare young people for a world changing faster than our parents could have imagined 40 years ago.

McNeese has what it takes to provide quality education in various programs. McNeese's growth has produced a progressive College of Business, with students from all over the world filling the classrooms of the new Business Economic Center. In the last 10 years, McNeese has added, expanded, or received accreditation in over two dozen programs, including engineering, geology, nursing, computer science, education, communication and biology and chemistry. In short, McNeese has grown into a dynamic university which produces graduates who are fully prepared to step into any area of the nation's job market.

Additionally, McNeese has what it takes in the area of social and recreational opportunities. Among the projects of expansion and development at McNeese is the new Recreation and Intramural Complex. The multi-million dollar facility has something for everyone and is now serving the needs of thousands of McNeese students and faculty members.

But in the midst of big university problems of insufficient parking and tight budget allowances, the one-on-one appeal and remembered warmth of McNeese Junior College and of the simpler days remains the university's greatest asset. As a result of everything the university offers, any student at McNeese can proudly proclaim: "We've got what it takes."

Fellowship among students helps to increase the fulfillment of college life. From intramurals to individual studies, McNeese offers hundreds of opportunities for special interests and diversions.

On campus and off, there are plenty of fun-filled activities. From the Go-Gos to Contraband Days and from Friday's at the Keg to Spring Fling, students enjoy the companionship of lasting friendships. Although McNeese strives for high academics, it recognizes the importance of the individual, and offers a warm and friendly atmosphere for group interaction. With so much to offer, McNeese always has what it takes to keep the students entertained.

Riding the High Tide

"Cowboys and Sailors Make Good Neighbors" was the theme for Homecoming 1984. October 20th-27th was established as the Cowboy's Homecoming week. The main festivities of the week began on Wednesday with a talent show held in the Para Ballroom sponsored by the Student Government Association.

Thursday was recognized as Amnesty Day. On this day University Police voided one parking ticket per student.

Friday brought about the climax of the week. At the close of classes a street dance celebration was held in front of Watkins Hall. Entertainment for the afternoon was provided by "Don't Ask." Along with the entertainment, food was also provided. Students consumed pounds of sausage along with cakes and soft drinks provided by the Resident Student Association. Following the street dance, McNeese fans showed their spirit at a pep rally and bonfire held at Cowboy Stadium. Participating in the pep rally were groups ranging from the cheerleaders to the McNeese Band. An exciting evening was had by all those who attended.

Foundation constructed floats to ride in the parade. Some of the winners of the float decorations contest were Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity, Resident Student Association, Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, and Wesley Foundation. Members of these and many other organizations showed their Cowboy support by riding in the parade and throwing candy and beads to those spectators along Ryan Street. Entertainment between floats was provided by the McNeese band along with local high school bands. Laura Welsh, Homecoming Queen 1983, made her last appearance as queen, while leading the parade from Southgate Mall down Ryan Street to the McNeese campus.

The week's activities led up to the Saturday night football game, where the Cowboys dropped the victory to the Northeast Indians by a score of 19 to 3. During halftime ceremonies, Sandra Canik, a senior medical technology major, was crowned Homecoming Queen 1984. Other members of the court were: Carmen Cormier (senior maid), Renee Fontenot (senior maid), Phyllis Porter (junior maid), Jodie Ballard (sophomore maid) and Karla East (freshman maid).

After the game the festivities continued with a dance in the Para Ballroom sponsored by the Alumni Association. As parties and dances continued on into the evening, Homecoming 1984 came to an end along with a week of fun, fanfare and frolic.

Performing stunts and constructing pyramids in national competition, as well as during sports events, gave the McNeese Cheerleading Squad a year of

Ups and Downs

Growth, advancement, and opportunity were the major forces behind this year's cheerleading squad. Four members of the team were chosen to be on the instruction staff for the National Cheerleader Association. The four chosen, Gina Delpapa, Leon Senegar, Vanessa Williams, and Bill Guillotte, traveled throughout the United States and Canada teaching cheers to high school students.

Sponsor Glenda Menard and co-captains Leon Senegar and Gina Delpapa composed dance routines for the cheerleaders to perform at University events and competitions. During the competition at the National Collegiate Cheerleader Camp, McNeese placed seventh out of all teams represented.

Being a cheerleader means making a commitment to motivating crowds of students, fans, and athletes. This group of enthusiastic cheerleaders thrives on supporting the Cowboys. Their cheerleading requires an immense amount of hard work and consumes an enormous amount of time. However, due to their pride and interest in cheering, the members of the McNeese squad let nothing stand in the way of being a cheerleader.

With such enthusiasm, it is no wonder the McNeese squad is tops in the nation.

Major Motion

An added attraction to Cowboy home basketball and football games is the performance of the Cowgirl Kickers. Dressed in blue or gold, these beauties make halftime as colorful and exciting as the game. They dazzle the audience and offer their support to the Cowboys. The dance troop has become a favorite of many Cowboy fans.

The Kickers are much more than pom-poms and pretty faces. They're a dedicated and hard-working precision dance team. Hours of work and practice go into each routine, but the hard work has paid off. Sponsor Glenda Menard and captain Lisa McMillin choreograph all the girls' routines, while manager Trey Broadhurst assists the girls with their music materials.

The Kicker line performs not only at athletic events, but also at such diverse activities as the Miss Louisiana Teen Pageant and the LaBelle Pageant as well as Senior Fun Day, and many others. The Cowgirl Kickers have proven that when it comes to entertainment, they've got more than it takes.

After winning their titles, Mr. McNeese and Miss McNeese LaBelle were able to experience the thrill of being

Among the Chosen Few

The history of the Miss LaBelle pageant dates back to the late 1940's. During this time, the McNeese Log staff sponsored an annual Miss McNeese pageant, which was an evening gown competition, where "Miss McNeese" was chosen by a panel of judges.

In the mid 1950's, the contest became known as Miss LaBelle and was taken over by the Student Government Association. Young women were nominated by campus organizations with Miss LaBelle and her court chosen in a campus-wide election.

Spring of 1975 brought about a number of changes for the pageant. The Student Government Association decided to have the contest become affiliated with the Miss America Pageant. In turn, each year a young woman is chosen by a panel of judges as Miss LaBelle and represents McNeese University in the Miss Louisiana Pageant. This individual is also a recipient of scholarships, cash prizes, and gifts from local supporters.

when Miss Jackie Ewing was crowned as Miss LaBelle 1984. Jackie, a mass communications major from Moss Bluff, was sponsored by the Cowgirl Kickers, and represented McNeese in the Miss Louisiana pageant held in Monroe. Miss Ewing also acted as master of ceremonies for several civic functions throughout the past year. On March 14, 1985, Miss Ewing handed over her crown to the new Miss LaBelle for 1985, Miss Vickie Myers.

Myers, a political science major from Lake Charles, was sponsored by Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, and is McNeese's representative in the 1986 Miss Louisiana Pageant.

First runner up, Renee Fontenot, a social studies education major from Lake Charles, was sponsored by Kappa Sigma fraternity.

Kelly Lovett was chosen as second runner up and also tied for the swimsuit preliminary competition. Lovett, a nursing major from Westlake, was nominated by Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Sulphur accounting major Carol Knight, who was chosen third runner up, represented Phi Chi Theta fraternity.

Vickie Doucet received the title of fourth runner up, Most Photogenic, and tied for the preliminary swimsuit competition. Doucet, a pharmacy major from Lake Charles, was sponsored by Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Other awards received that night were Miss Congeniality, awarded to Allison Wentzell of Chi Omega, and the Talent Award going to Stacy Smith, who represented Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

Similar to the Miss LaBelle Pageant, an annual Mr. McNeese contest is also held. Mr. McNeese for 1985 was Joe Dumars, a management and marketing major from Natchitoches. Unlike the Miss LaBelle contest, Mr. McNeese is chosen by a campus-wide election, with nominations being screened by the Student Government Association. Dumars' athletic ability, which led to many of the Cowboy basketball teams' victories, was much of the reason for his election as Mr. McNeese for 1985.

Selected in student elections conducted by the SGA, the Freshman and Spring Courts are

The Cream of the Crop

Students are recognized on a variety of courts selected by the McNeese student body. Two of these courts are the Freshman Court chosen in the fall during football season, and Spring Court selected during the basketball season. The names of the 1984 Freshman Court were announced and the court was presented at the halftime show during the McNeese/Northeast football game. Michelle Polito, a nursing major from Lake Charles, was crowned queen and her court members included Christy Simmons, a special education major from Dallas; Stacy Smith, an early childhood education major from Lake Charles; Melissa Dellafosse, a nursing major from Sulphur; and Vickie Doucet, a pharmacy major from Lake Charles.

Pam Derouen, a senior majoring in word processing, had the honor of being crowned queen of the 1985 Spring Court during the halftime presentation of the McNeese/North Texas State basketball game. Members of her court included Ginger Foreman, a senior accounting major; Tina Hall, a senior health and physical education major; Barbara Fredericks, a junior accounting major; Lisa McMillan, a junior nursing major; Renee Fruge, a sophomore mass communications major; and Vickie Doucet, a freshman pharmacy major.

Head Over Heels

The McNeese Student Union Board presented the Lake Charles area with the Go Gos concert on Tuesday, October 2, 1984. Thanks to the aid of many McNeese students, Student Union Board was able to sponsor the concert as a McNeese student presentation. On the night of the concert, McNeese students could be found in the various areas of handling tickets, security, and assisting with the lights and sounds. The SUB was proud to present the Lake Charles area with such a successful event as the Go Gos concert.

The opening band for the Go Gos was The Red Rockers. Originating in New Orleans, the Red Rockers, featuring John Griffith as lead singer, are known world wide. Upon leaving Lake Charles, The Red Rockers traveled to Japan for a tour.

Following The Red Rockers' performance the Go Gos played to a near capacity crowd. The Go Gos performed one of the longest concerts ever held at the Civic Center.

The variety of songs played by the group ranged from "We Got The Beat" to "Turn To You". Gina Schock, Go Gos' drummer, demonstrated clearly to the audience that "She's got the beat". Lead singer Belinda Carlisle showed the audience just how well her vocal cords worked, and aiding her were background vocal singer, Kathy Valentine, and Charlotte Caffey on keyboards.

Two days before the concert, Go Gos fans camped outside the Civic Center doors to insure a "hot place" at the concert. As the hour for the concert drew nearer, fans packed the Civic Center grounds full of excitement and anticipation for the concert. After hours of performing, the Go Gos ended their show and headed on the road for Austin, Texas, where they performed the next night. Although the bands thought of the concert as just another performance, people of the Lake Charles area thought of it as a night of Rock and Roll to remember.

With a sell-out crowd and an action-packed performance, the Rick Springfield concert was

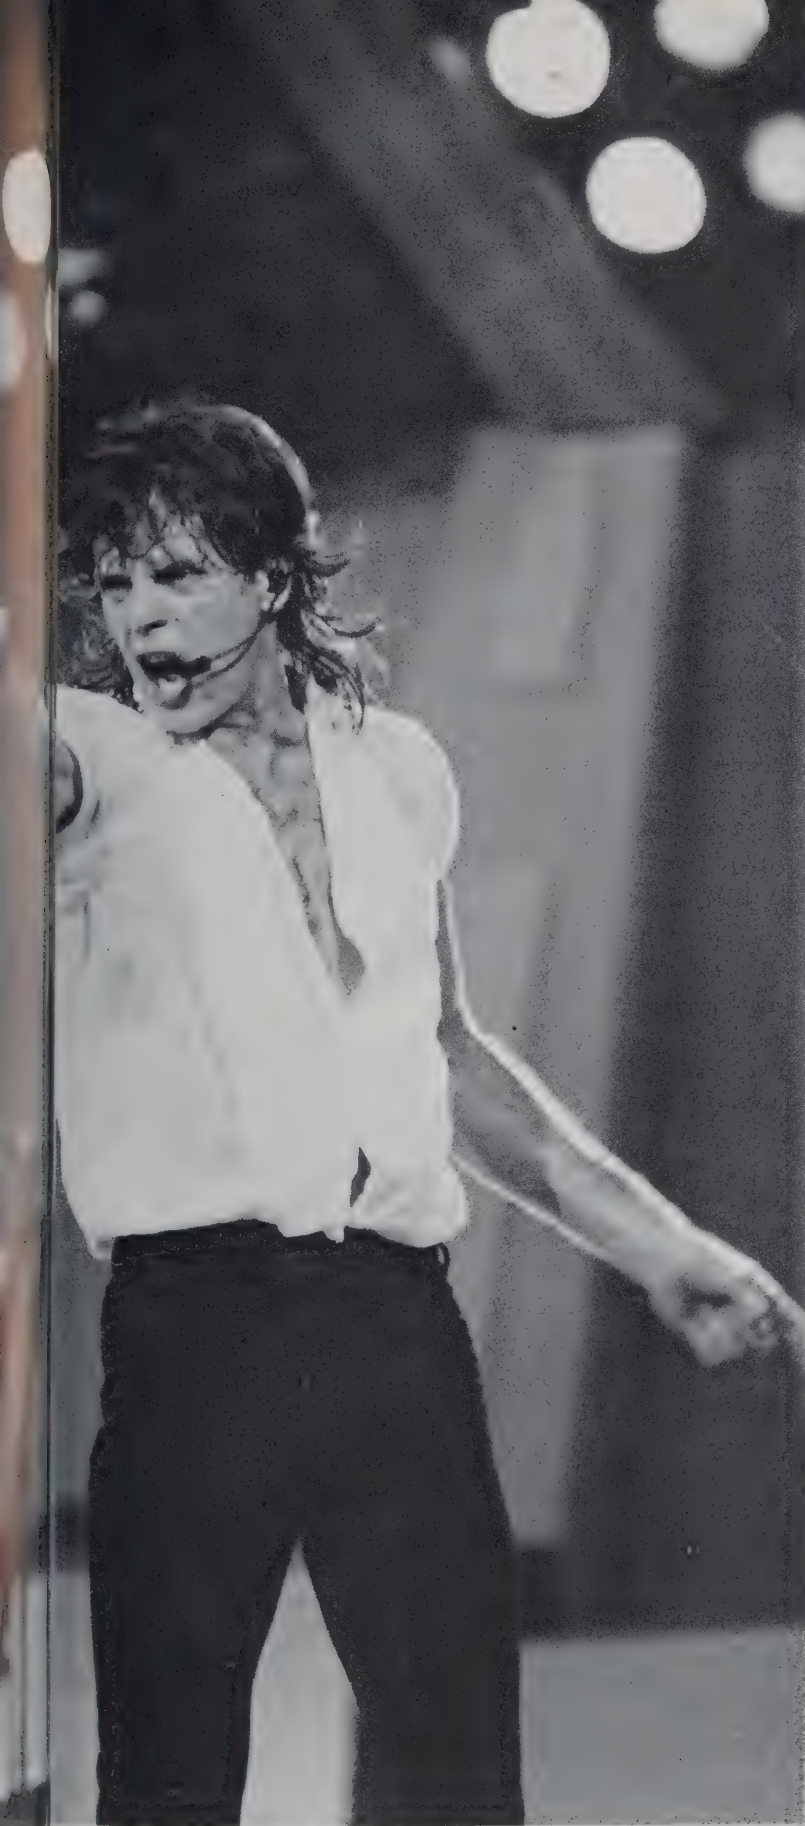

Record Perfect

The Lake Charles Civic Center was host to the Rick Springfield concert held on November 19, 1984 with special guest Corey Hart. Fans looking for good seats packed the Civic Center grounds hours before the concert. Corey Hart opened the concert with his hit song "Sunglasses at Night," and prepared the crowd for the main attraction of the evening, Rick Springfield.

Springfield has become known worldwide for his hits, "Don't Walk Away", "Love Somebody", and "Bop Till You Drop". During the past few years Springfield has concentrated on his film debut in "Hard to Hold" in which he served as both star and soundtrack producer. This production allowed him to form his own company, and to prepare for the production of his next motion picture. Springfield has also demonstrated his talent by winning a 1981 Grammy for his song, "Jessie's Girl" and by appearing as special guest on a number of television shows. The success of Rick Springfield was definitely shown by his sell-out concert at the Lake Charles Civic Center, with area fans of all ages looking forward to Springfield's next tour, hoping he will return.

The addition of a new lead singer and the success of their number one single "Night Shift" opened the way for the Commodores to make

A Classic Comeback

Motown recording artists, the Commodores, appeared in the Lake Charles Civic Center on April 14, 1985. Opening for the group was the eldest daughter of America's number one recording family, singer Rebbie Jackson. Jackson entertained with songs that included her hit single, "Centipede" preparing the crowd for the highlight of the evening, the Commodores.

With Lionel Richie no longer with them, his replacement, J. D. Nicholas, of England, has proven to be an asset by offering new life to the group. The other members of the Commodores, William King, Ronald LaPread, Walter Orange, and Milan Williams, who have been together since their early college days at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama, also feel that this addition was a plus.

While the changes that have taken place have brought new life into the group; the Commodores also feel that if something is good, to remain good, it needs to undergo changes. These changes paid off in 1985 when "Nightshift," their musical tribute to the late Marvin Gaye and Jackie Wilson rose to the top of the music charts. The success of this single opened many new doors for the group, who, as a result of this success, were able to bring their new style of music to cities across the country, including Lake Charles. The absence of Lionel Richie did not limit the appeal of their earlier hits which also brought fans to their feet.

The group, being dedicated musicians, feel that their first duty is to their fans, and this was proven by their high energy performance in Lake Charles Civic Center. "The Commodores feel first that we have to perform," LePread explained. "The show is the most important thing, especially when the people are there. To be on stage is probably my biggest thrill!"

Coming to Life

On the night of Tuesday, April 30, in the Lake Charles Civic Center Coliseum, the SOS and Klymaxx bands put on a performance to be remembered for years to come. The bands appeared as part of the Contraband Days activities and were sponsored by Contraband Days, Inc.

The Georgia-based SOS band, whose initials stand for Sounds of Success, put on a show featuring their latest hits from the album Just The Way You Like It. With some of the best blues-rock music, such as the title hit, "Weekend Girl", "No One's Gonna Love You", "Feeling", and "Breakup"; SOS brought the crowds to their feet dancing.

Klymaxx, an all-girl group, played the successful tune "Meeting In The Ladies' Room", from the album of the same name. The band featuring six women also entertained their fans with the song, "The Men All Pause". Their outrageous appearance, combined with their unique performing style, has appealed to fans since they cut their first album.

The bands' performance was part of the beginning of the "Kool Jazz Fest", sponsored by distributors of Kool cigarettes. The nation-wide tour began in Los Angeles and traveled its way around the country back to San Francisco.

The production of four critically acclaimed plays by the McNeese Bayou Players gave the campus and community

Great Entertainment

McNeese University Theatre Bayou Players celebrated their Forty-fifth Season this year with the most successful season ever! William Saroyan's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, The Time of Your Life, played to full houses every night — a gleeful, heartbreaking, tender and hilarious, probing, elusive play about a man's search for happiness and answers to the far-reaching enigmas of life. Set in a waterfront saloon in San Francisco, a bizarre collection of barflies become entangled as they try to help solve each other's problems. This American Theatre classic was overwhelmingly received by University and Lake Charles audiences. Dan A. Plato directed The Time of Your Life, completing his third year at McNeese teaching and directing in the Theatre Department.

The second production was an original play by Shelley Fitze, Daughters of Heaven, a docu-drama that captures the challenge and courage demonstrated in the lives of America's first women pilots — Amelia Earhart, Louise Thaden, and Ruth Nichols. This was an experimental production recapturing the sights and sounds of the 20's and 30's, directed by Dr. Susan E. Kelso, visiting lecturer, who will join the Theatre faculty in the fall of 1985. The Bayou Players had the privilege and pleasure of having the playwright attend a performance followed by a Reception honoring her, the 99's (an international organization for women pilots), and McNeese University Theatre Angels. A Play Writing Workshop was conducted by Ms. Fitze during her stay on campus. The workshop was sponsored by the Theatre Department and the Calcasieu Arts and Humanities Council. Other guests during the run of Daughters of Heaven included Edna Gardner Whyte, an original 99, and Donna Yancey, a free-lance writer. The production was received with enthusiastic response by audiences each night who came from as far as San Antonio and Baton Rouge!

The Threepenny Opera was the third musical in cooperation with the Music Department and was the most successful to date with packed houses every night. Threepenny Opera addresses politics, ethics, ideas of love, and standards of art within the twentieth century society. Yet, for all its satire, it is a vastly entertaining and engaging work, as popular today as the day it was first performed. With Kurt Weill's music, the tunes are at once catchy and haunting. Brecht's underlying social commentaries are set in the context of a delightful and evocative score. Michele Martin from the Music Department joined forces with the Theatre Department to direct this spectacular production. During the production of Three-penny Opera, a Forty-fifth Anniversary Reception was held with a Theatre History Exhibit in the lobby displaying memorabilia from the Margery Wilson years to current productions.

Cat On A Hot Tin Roof, another Pulitzer Prize winning play, closed the season, playing to full houses every night. This powerful play is one of Tennessee Williams' greatest — a delicately wrought exercise in human communication. By desperately avoiding the truths around them, the characters try to escape the loneliness of their private lives. As the expression of a point of view about life, the play is limpid and effortless — as theatre, it is superb! Dan A. Plato, Acting Director of Theatre, directed this outstanding production. A second Theatre History Exhibit was on display during Cat On A Hot Tin Roof, featuring plays that have become American Classics.

With the close of the 1984-85 season, the long-awaited awards were presented at the Drama Awards Banquet. Outstanding Performance Awards were presented to Riki Plaisance for his role as Kit Carson in The Time Of Your Life and Kathleen McCall for her performance as Mrs.

Finding Their Limits

The multi-million dollar Recreational and Intramural Complex is a welcome addition to the McNeese Campus. The Complex provides the university's several thousand students with a variety of recreational opportunities — an Olympic sized pool, steam and sauna rooms, four raquetball courts, a multi-purpose arena, 200-meter indoor track, weightroom, and dressing rooms for faculty and students.

Administered through McNeese's Student Services division, the Recreational Complex is the only one in the state to offer such diversified uses. The complex — which took over three years to construct — has proved immensely popular.

The staff of the Rec. is headed by Jimmy Pitre, the Director of Recreation and Intramurals. Coach Pitre and the staff help to make the complex enjoyable and efficient as possible.

The Rec-Complex has something to offer everyone. For the competitive person, there are year round intramural sports. The fitness conscious person will enjoy the weightroom and indoor track, as well as the other amenities. The favorite part of the complex has proven to be the indoor-outdoor Olympic-size swimming pool. Here students can swim year round or work on their summer

tan. The Recreational and Intramural Complex does have something for everyone — for both the spirited competitor and the easy-going pool lover.

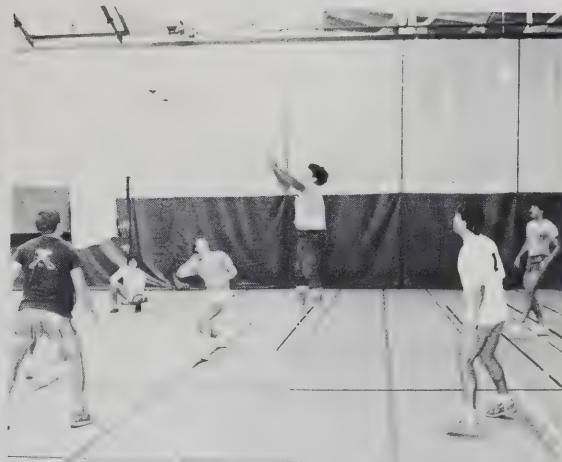

While other universities are striving to achieve the success of McNeese's Recreation Complex, the Student Services Division is already planning new attractions for the university's "fun place".

Building a Better Mousetrap

National Engineering Week was observed by the McNeese State University Engineering Society the week of February 11-15 with a full slate of activities.

Open house at the McNeese Engineering Department on Monday evening kicked off the week's activities. Tuesday saw local high school students touring the McNeese facilities. Also, the Engineering Exposition was held at the Civic Center.

contest was held on Wednesday, with Steve Hart of Sulphur winning $50 in the structures contest and Carol Young of Reeves placing second. Scott Laughlin of Lake Charles received first place and Carol Young second in the mousetrap contest. The winner of the kite contest was Roger Grandchamp of Sulphur, with Paul Bauer of Lake Charles taking second.

The highlight of the week was the LES-MES Awards Banquet held at the Lake Charles Country Club. The Engineering Court was presented and scholarships were awarded. Katherine Meadows, a senior chemical engineering major from DeRidder was crowned queen. Maids were seniors Gloria Welch, an electrical engineering major from Sicily Island; Bridget Marcantel, a mechanical engineering major from Lake Charles; and Patricia Wadsack, a civil engineering major from Lake Charles.

Bridget Marcantel was also named the 1985 recipient of the Louisiana Engineering Society Scholarships and Brent Garner of Welsh received the Louisiana Engineering Society Auxiliary's "Outstanding Junior" scholarship award.

The Gulf States Utilities Scholarships went to Darrell Vinson and James Marryott, both of Lake Charles. Karen Sue Morine of Sulphur was presented the American Institute of Chemical Engineers scholarship, and Carl Perkins of Lake Charles was named the American Society of Mechanical Engineers' "Outstanding Mechanical Engineering Student."

On Friday volleyball competition between the various disciplines was held. The chemical engineers made a clean sweep of the games and then a joint discipline party ended the week's activities.

Dressed alike in gold jackets and blue slacks, the Ambassadors represent McNeese State University with

A Flair for Style

When you think of ambassadors, do you think of foreign dignitaries? Well, think again; we have our own ambassadors at McNeese.

The group consists of 20 students who were selected on the basis of intelligence, service and leadership backgrounds. The students represented McNeese at various functions throughout the year, ranging from Senior Fun Day to Cowboy football games.

Wearing gold blazers and blue slacks, the students directed state and national officials around the campus.

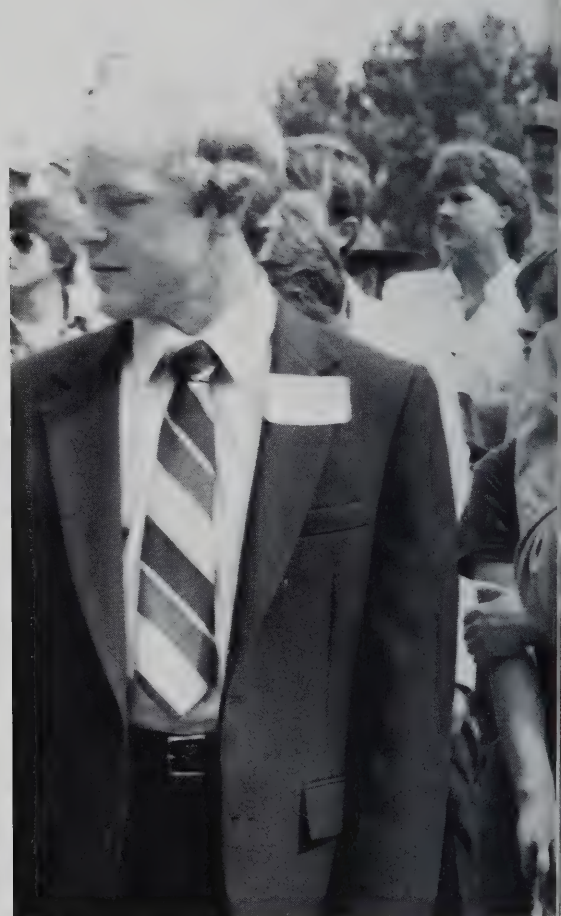

Applicants were reviewed by a committee of faculty members and students directed by Dr. Fred Lyons, head of the department of Administration, Supervision, and Certification. Dr. Lyons is credited with engineering the idea for the group.

The students serving as hosts and hostesses receive a $100 scholarship each semester they serve, and are required to maintain a grade point average of 2.5 or above and be of sophomore standing.

"This is a number one honor for a McNeese student, and as the committee becomes more and more sought after and visible, I expect membership to become ever more prestigious," Dr. Lyons said.

The registration process was modernized by newly installed computers which helped in

Updating the System

The new computer system used for spring registration has cut down on previous time requirements and paperwork errors of the past. Sundarum Swetharanyam, manager of the University Computing Services, calls the system "supurb".

The centrally-based system eliminates the problem of having information at different locations. "With different sources," Swetharanyam said, "keeping records in duplication could always present a problem, but with this new system it is eliminated."

Students now present a trial schedule to a computer terminal operator and receive a printout of classes, fees and charges for delinquent parking tickets. In previous semesters students were required to obtain class cards, report back to their advisor in the event of a closed class, and spend hours waiting in line. With the new system, the student makes one stop at a terminal and is informed immediately of his or her schedule. This eliminates the chance of record inconsistency.

The computer network, called the Educational Information System

(EIS), was first implemented on a trial basis during the summer. Purchased from IBM in 1982 for approximately $35,000, the EIS is founded on four components: the data base, registration system, student records and grading system.

While other schools may have similar systems, Swetharanyam did not know of any other computer registration systems in the state which relay information to the students immediately, as McNeese's does. "Other schools may have faster systems, but unlike ours, they are delay-oriented," he said.

Linda Finley, registrar, agreed that the system is unique. "We are the only ones who actually register on the terminal," she said. Although she felt the system may have a few problems, she considered it a significant improvement in the registration process.

McNeese students also seem to feel that the new computer system is beneficial. According to Delisa Washington, "It's an efficient, simple process," and according to David Nunez: "You don't have to stand in long lines."

Krewe of Krewe parades and dancing in the streets make Mardi Gras

A Sight to See

Mardi Gras is a French tradition in Southwest Louisiana. It is a day of fun and feasting before the solemnity and fasting of Lent. When classes let out, the parties begin. Bands of all kinds, from Cajun French to Rock and Roll entertain crowds of people in dance halls and on the streets.

One of the great attractions of the Lake Charles Mardi Gras is the parades. The parades wind their way from McNeese through the city to the Civic Center, with a truck parade first and the Krewe of Krewes parade following. Floats and dazzling costumes make the parades a sight to see; but the beads, trinkets, and doubloons distinguish the Mardi Gras parades from any other.

Food and drink are also major parts of the Mardi Gras celebration. Gumbo, boudin, and beer make up the meal of the day. There's no cooking like Cajun cooking, and no party like Mardi Gras.

Mardi Gras celebrations actually begin weeks before with balls and banquets fit for a king. Young and old alike join in the celebration, producing a time full of fun and excitement for everyone.

As the first of the Lake Charles parades, the truck parade featured entries that were of a different style. The Frosty Factory's entry, a comedic looking armadillo, was one of the most unusual entries in the afternoon parade. (Photo by T. Maricle)

The decision to move the 1985 Spring Fling activities to the Burton Coliseum shows that McNeese believes in a

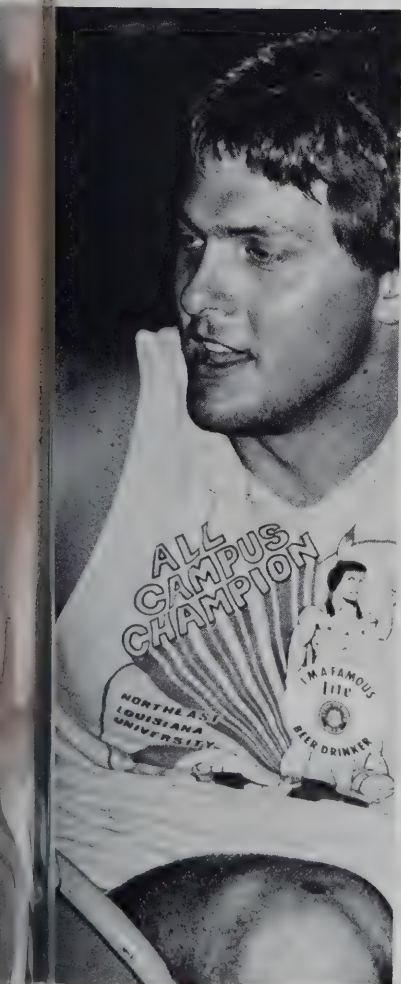

Break in Tradition

Almost Anything Goes and the Rodeo's Spring Fling activities were held from April 25-27 at Burton Coliseum. Along with the Intramurals Department and the McNeese Rodeo Team, other student organizations such as RSA, SGA, and SUB helped make the events possible.

The activities began on Thursday evening, April 25, with an outstanding performance by the McNeese Rodeo Team. But there was much more to come. Festivities continued the next day with the "Almost Anything Goes" competitions, which included volleyball, crazy relays, a roommate game, push ball, simon says, and even lady mud-wrestling. The afternoon was completed with the presentation of the Greek Week awards and the performance of a local rock band. Later that evening the crowds were treated to another performance of the McNeese Rodeo Team. Following the Rodeo, a dance featuring the band Uncle Remus entertained.

Activities began again on Saturday with a crawfish cook-off to determine the best crawfish chef in Lake Charles. The cook-off was followed by a crawfish boil; and as the afternoon continued, a battle of the bands was held along with the Matt Armstrong Shows. Later, during the evening, the McNeese Rodeo Team once again performed and took the top rankings for the team title in the short-go, bringing the Fling to an end.

Food, games, rides, exhibits, dancing, music, and competition at Contraband Days are a few of the reasons to

Indulge Yourself

This year's Contraband Days Festival was the biggest and best Lake Charles has ever seen, with people from throughout the state and nation jamming the Civic Center grounds for two fun-filled weeks of activities.

Kicking off the festivities was the annual Contraband Days parade which began with the landing of the pirate king, Jean LaFitte, and his party at the Civic Center. The pirate crew promptly captured the entire city, dunked a few people in the lake, and led the all-conquering parade through the streets of downtown Lake Charles.

A spectacular fireworks display by Merit Harbor Lights capped off the evening by flooding the Lake Charles area with burst of colored light and illuminating the boats on the lake. Landlubbers lined the lake-shore and boaters dropped anchor for "front row" seats as the explosions went off directly overhead.

Other events of note were the crawfish race, a bathtub race, and a five-miler, which attracted hundreds of runners and fans. Also, there was a tug-of-war and dance contest. In addition, there were such special events as the University of Philippines Choir performing at the McNeese Auditorium, the Harvard-McNeese Debate (won by Harvard for the first time in four years), a Jazz Fest, and helicopter rides. During the entire two-week period thousands of spectators flocked to the Civic Center grounds and other areas of interest for special events and exhibitions.

The canoe rides, the Lake Charles Yacht Club Regatta, the Q 101 Jam, the Summer Treasures Fashion Show, a pizza eating contest, and a Folk Art Exhibit all proved to be hits with the crowds.

There were also more serious events too, such as the Protestant Waterfront Service and the performance of classical music by the Barbe Symphonic band and the McNeese Wind Ensemble. The Association of Speech Pathologists presented a display at the Prien Lake Mall, along with a Rejoice '85 Gospel Concert.

Athletic tournaments were held at the Mallard Cove Golf Club and the Bayou Pines Racket Club, a soccer tournament was held at Huber Park, and Autocross races were held at Chennault. However, one of the most spectacular events turned out to be the high-speed races sponsored by the American Power Boat Association.

Finally, there was the traditional Cajun food — tons of it. More than 5,000 people crowded the annual Food Fest to eat crawfish, boudin, and all sorts of other delicacies.

During the two weeks of Contraband Days, people ate, danced, drank, met old friends and made new ones, and made this years' festival the biggest, most spectacular and memorable ever.

With finals being taken at the end of each semester, the students often find that they are

Taking Chances

There was the usual amount of cramming, fingernail biting, and coffee drinking during finals week. With the biggest graduating class ever finishing degrees, there was even more pressure than usual.

As the week wore on, the lines of students selling back books grew longer at the bookstore and more people double parked in the lots around the main buildings, causing the campus police to give even more tickets. With finals going on, the students dorms and the library were, once again, the hotspots on campus.

Finally it was over, and nearly all the students headed for home, leaving the campus almost deserted. It was now the teachers jobs to stand in long lines to read out their grades to the registrar's office. As a result of the switch over to the new computer system, the registrar workers had to struggle through several nights in order to get the graduating senior, regular, and honor grades out on time.

Even though it is a very long week for everyone — students, teachers, and staff alike — finals are a necessary part of college.

After completing their studies and setting their sights on career opportunities, McNeese graduates are entering

A Whole New World

More than 540 students received degrees at the spring semester commencement exercises held at the Civic Center, and an overflow crowd of parents and friends was in the stands to cheer on the graduates.

In his opening remarks, Dr. Jack Doland pointed out this was the largest commencement in the 47-year history of McNeese. He paid tribute to the graduates and to the wives, husbands, parents, and other family members who made sacrifices to help these students complete their educations.

The guest speaker of the evening was Governor Edwin Edwards. He pointed out that only one out of 12 students in Louisiana graduates from college and he also noted that there is a continuing need to upgrade education in the state. Also, he pointed out that graduates should not consider their education finished upon graduation. He urged them to continue to learn, to have the courage to think for themselves, and to risk the challenge of new ideas.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation of a Doctor of Humane Letters degree to local civic leader and philanthropist William Lawton, president of Calcasieu Marine National Bank. In presenting the award, President Doland noted Dr. Lawton's many contributions to McNeese and his tireless efforts to improve the quality of life in Southwest Louisiana.

...And It Takes -Organization-

Through departmental and extracurricular organizations, McNeese students have the opportunity to learn and socialize outside the classroom. National and local groups provide students with information and relationships with members of their chosen curricula. Still other clubs deal with providing services to the McNeese campus, while honors organizations recognize students who have brought distinction to McNeese without sacrificing a high scholastic average. McNeese has what it takes to offer students a variety of extracurricular activities which are informative, interesting, and can aid students in the learning process.

Through extensive research and the application of forensic skills, the Debate Team has shown that they can argue

Pro's and Con's

The State Champion Debate Team has entered intercollegiate competition over ten times in the past year, posting wins over debating powers such as UCLA, the Air Force Academy, Weber State University, Loyola Chicago, Baylor, Tulane, and BYU. One of their peaks this season was winning sweepstakes in the Mardi Gras Swing National Invitational, a two-tournament competition. Sixty-six colleges and universities dueled at LSU and at the University of Texas at San Antonio, where McNeese won with 132 points, beating the second-place team by a 48-point margin.

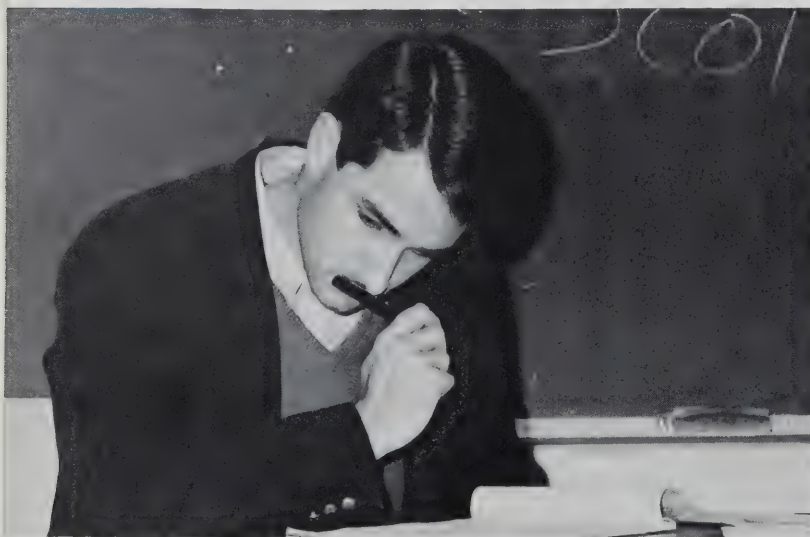

The preparation for the debates began as soon as the team received the semester's resolution from the CEDA National Committee. For the fall, the resolution read, Resolved: That the federal government censorship is justified to defend the national security of the United States. In the spring, the resolution was, Resolved: That the United States is justified in providing military support to nondemocratic nations.

After receiving these resolutions, each two-member squad began extensive research to make cases. These cases were used to prove the squad's particular stance on the resolution. The teams had to argue both sides of the resolution, so several cases had to be written. Finally, after hours of research and writing, the cases were heard by Debate Coach William Casey. Those cases selected for competition were then re-researched, rewritten, and put through a rigorous intersquad debate to work out any loose ends. At this time several weeks had passed since the resolution had been received and the team was now ready to compete against the other 278 teams across the nation.

At a typical tournament, each two-member team engaged in eight debates with each debate lasting about 1½ hours. Those teams with the best records for the eight rounds broke into the finals system hoping for victory.

makes the Student Government Association

Leaders of the Pack

Homecoming. LaBelle. The Student Senate.

All of these huge tasks were the responsibility of the Student Government Association (SGA). SGA also offered such diverse services as free legal advice, tutoring and a babysitter referral service.

Homecoming 1984, one of the Student Government Associations biggest events, tied in with the community's effort to bring a Navy homeport to the Lake Charles area. With the theme heralding "Cowboys and Sailors Make Good Neighbors," and parade floats featuring sailors in some form or another, McNeese's pride in the naval effort was easily seen.

During the annual LaBelle Pageant, Vickie Myers was crowned Miss McNeese LaBelle. The pageant featured SGA President David Green as host, and former titleholder, Jackie Ewing as guest entertainment.

The SGA Senate routinely approved money bills for student organizations, passed referendums and served as a voice for student concerns. Meeting every other week, the Senate chose scholarship winners, candidates for Mr. McNeese and decided which assessment proposals could be placed before the student body for future voting.

SGA also took an active role in politics, with David Green being elected chairman of the Louisiana Council of Student Body Presidents. Also, Green and Senate Chairman Rob McCorquodale presented a resolution opposing a proposed 21 drinking age at a public hearing in Lafayette, while the Senate called for improvements to Frasch Hall.

Compiling all of the necessary elements to produce the 1985 Log in time to meet deadlines made the Log staff experience

Sheer Madness

All of the madness of "yearbook publishing" began in the late spring of 1984. At that time, the 1985 yearbook editor was chosen. Rickie Rozas, a senior finance major, was appointed Editor-in-Chief for the 1984-85 Log. During the summer term, the planning of the yearbook began, with the editor and assistant editor (Carmen Chevalier) attending a design and planning seminar at Louisiana Tech University. After returning from the design seminar, the Log's new office was set up, and a staff was hired; and with the commencement of the new fiscal year, a new advisor (Carolyn Moffett) was appointed.

When the fall semester began, the staff work on the yearbook started. The staff received their final section assignments and began making photo assignments, writing copy, and gathering all the necessary information for use in their particular sections. At this time, the near 6,000 head shots had arrived, and the staff was busy cutting and alphabetizing head shots in addition to their other duties.

While the staff was working on the inside of the Log, Charlene Whitney's advertising design students were working on the cover. A design contest was held among these students to find a special cover for the yearbook. After judging of the 54 entries, a cover designed by Joe Jackson, a Sulphur graduate student, was chosen.

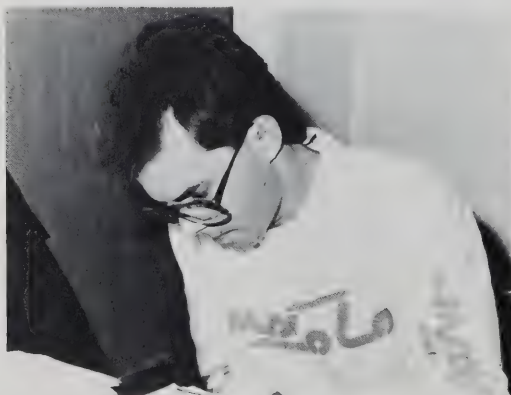

Throughout the year, deadlines arrived, with both staffers and photographers working relentlessly to meet each of the four publishing deadlines. With the help of a staff varying from ten to fifteen people, all of the copy, photographs, cutlines and layouts managed to combine into the 1985 Log.

Once all of the physical designing of the book was completed, proofs had to be studied for errors, and revisions had to be made to ensure the publishing of a quality yearbook.

Finally, it was all over. The last picture had been taken, the last cutline had been written, and the last page had been sent off. But then, it was time for the "madness" to start all over again.

Yearbook publishing was more than writing copy and taking pictures. Assistant Editor Carmen Chevalier spent many hours on the phone getting interviews and setting up photo sessions. (Photo by T. Maricle)

by bringing in concerts, sponsoring parties, and staging fashion shows, SUB

Let the Good Times Roll

Sparked by an increased assessment and new officers, the Student Union Board (SUB) kicked off a full schedule of events with an extremely successful Go Gos concert in the fall.

The SUB's schedule never slowed down after that concert, and the year's events included fashion shows, concerts, pictures, movies, and even a play that was on world tour.

The Board's Fashion Committee staged a number of shows during the year, featuring themes such as "Spring to Color", "A Mood of Romance" and "Fad fashions."

To continue the concert scene that began with the Go Gos, Autograph rocked the McNeese Auditorium during the spring semester with their hit, "Turn Up the Radio". Also, the Accelerators put the pedal to the floor in the Parra Ballroom. To continue the variety of entertainment promised, comedians Mike Reynolds, Bill Keller and Kelley Rodgers competed in a SUB Laff-off.

Just a few weeks before appearing on "60 Minutes" and the cover of Time, Soviet defector Arkady Shevchenko spoke on the McNeese campus about the inner workings of the Kremlin. To top off the speakers during the year, motivational speaker Jayne Lybrand lectured at two seminars on body language, offering hints on how to read other people's body symbols.

The annual movie schedule included box-office hits with the likes of Purple Rain and The Terminator being featured in the Parra Ballroom. The motion pictures shown were chosen to appeal to a wide cross-section of tastes. This resulted in films ranging from Apocalypse Now to Batman being selected for student viewing.

One of the year's outstanding performances included the Facets Theatre Ensemble of Chicago performing the play "Macondo". The play, presented in the university's theater, was an experiment to test the show before it was taken overseas.

The Student Union Board's annual parties were some of the most popular events on campus. A fall street dance with food, live music and, of course, beer, drew a festive Friday afternoon crowd to the courtyard in front of the Old Ranch, while the Spring Fling held at Burton Coliseum presented one of the best turnouts yet.

SUB President Frank Sheridan's philosophy was that the Student Union Board should entertain the students of McNeese; that's just what the SUB seemed to do.

The Contraband entertained, informed, and sometimes infuriated its readers by

Putting It in Print

The shrillness of Madonna was barely heard over the clatter of typewriters. Tired staffers shuffled layout sheets, edited copy, and pictures trying to create a balanced layout. Between the jokes and song parodies, more serious matters of column inches and headline suggestions were being discussed. Yes, it was Sunday afternoon at the Contraband office.

Contraband, the student newspaper, underwent many changes which resulted in a completely new look. There was a new banner and section headings, designed by Lisa Hawkins; shiny, three-tiered stands to hold the papers; and a new advisor — Carolyn Moffett. The most noticeable change, though, was the new size.

The Contraband premiered its first broadsheet issue on October 30. This nearly doubled the size of the paper, which allowed the staff to be more creative with layouts, sell more advertising space, and use some color. Occasionally, however, it just meant more newspaper ink on the reader's hands.

In order to encourage reader participation, the Contraband sponsored its first annual Writing Contest. Over 50 poems, short stories and essays were entered. Francis Regan, a sophomore English major, placed first in both the fiction and poetry divisions with his short story, "Visualization" and his poem, "Busboy Looks at a Table". Richard Friesen, a freshman general agriculture major, placed first in the essay division with "Changing Places". The division winners had their submissions published in the November 20 issue of the paper.

With the new broadsheet and additional student participation, the Contraband had a noticeably busy year.

With the efforts of clergy as well as students, the Newman Club is

Keeping the Faith

Daily Mass, the worship ceremony of the Roman Catholic faith, had Newman Club members actively taking part in it. They served as lectors, music ministers, altar servers, and Eucharistic ministers.

The club's activities were not limited to serving at Mass. They attended many conferences and spiritual retreats and held ceremonies for the religious holidays. Also they had many social functions that included parties for all occasions and barbeques.

The Newman Club exists to serve the needs of students. It is an organization where one can meet new friends, grow through sharing, and seek answers to questions about faith and commitment to God.

Carrying out worthwhile projects in addition to having fun shows that Phi Chi Theta can mix

Business With Pleasure

It was carried from door to door, packed around campus, and brought to other places where people meet. "It" was the "Tom Wat" showcase, a fund-raising project of Phi Chi Theta professional business fraternity.

Members lugged the bulky, suitcase-shaped boxes, taking the orders of customers who enjoyed doing some of their Christmas shopping without the crowds and the long lines. Phi Chi Theta also benefitted by making over $1700 from the sale of "Tom Wat" products and by broadening the sales experience of its members.

Being a business fraternity, Phi Chi Theta encouraged cooperation among people preparing business careers. The members held business and professional meetings, inviting area business people to speak.

Being in Phi Chi Theta was not all "Tom Wat" and meetings, though. Members helped to collect money for the Heart Fund Street Drive in February and participated in the International Food Fest during the fall. Also, there were the pledging and initiation ceremonies, assorted parties, and the Spring Banquet.

Learning battle strategy and competing with other corps has put McNeese's ROTC

On Active Duty

The Fall of 1984 was a very busy time for ROTC. Color Guards were provided for various civic functions around the Lake Charles area; among them the Homecoming and Veteran's Day parades. Also a survival lab in Westlake and the annual Fall Field Training Exercise were held.

Among visiting dignitaries during the past year was Colonel Harold R. Brizee, regional commander.

The Annual Turkey Shoot was, once again, very successful, netting approximately $900 for the Corps. Cadets also participated in the Louisiana Air Show and the Annual Cal-Cam Fair Festival.

The spring semester began with the Annual Military Ball. The traditional presentation of the seniors and their dates and spouses in a sabre arch and the traditional toasts were the highlights of the ceremony.

The Recondo Club was active during the spring, going to Arkansas during spring break. Also during the spring semester, the cadets went on two FTXs, one in Merryville and the other at Camp Beauregard.

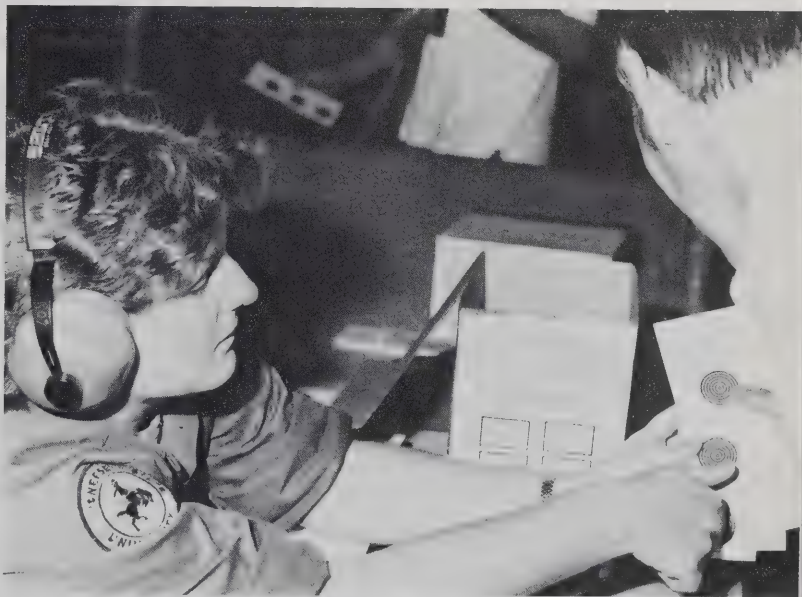

In the spring, ROTC supported a fund raiser for Special Olympics by collecting checks from Lake Charles businessmen.

At Honors Day, superior cadets were decorated, and Major General Ansel M. Stroud, the State Adjutant General of Louisiana, was the keynote speaker.

The Rifle Team, quite active this year, did well considering its limited experience. In December, the team hosted Lamar University and won the shooting match. McNeese also participated in three postal matches at the University of Akron (Ohio), Greenville High School (Alabama), and California State University (Fresno). Other matches which were completed this year included the Governor's Annual Invitational Match, and the ROTC Regional postal.

By sponsoring interesting diversions as well as solving problems within student housing, the Resident Students' Association is regulating the

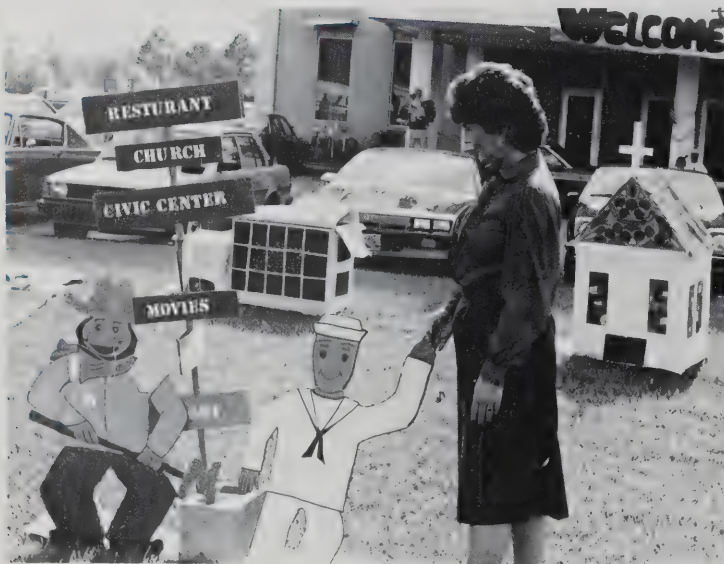

Standard of Living

Comprised of representatives elected by the residents of each dormitory, the Resident Students' Association represents the interests of students who reside on campus. The residents collectively vote on the executive officers of the RSA, which also regulates, administers, and coordinates programs and activities pertaining to students. In addition, the RSA promotes better living conditions in the residence halls.

Improvement of dormitory management and conditions requires the RSA to hold fund raising activities. One program which aided this effort in the fall semester was a Hawaiian Dance in the Parra Ballroom of the Student Union. Benefits and other fund raisers included a barbeque dinner for all residents, a houseware exhibition for junior and senior women, and a Tae Kwon Do/Martial Arts demonstration in Burton Residence Hall.

One activity that involves all of the residence halls is the Dormitory Decorating Contest held each year in conjunction with Homecoming. The honors of first place in the 1984 judging went to Collette Hall in the female residence division and in the male residence division, Watkins Hall.

Publishing of the campus directory as well as volunteering time for other events proves that Blue Key provides

Service with Style

Blue Key, a men's honor organization, takes on the responsibility of publishing and distributing the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of over 8,000 students, faculty, and staff in their Blue Key Directory. These directories were available for the spring semester being sold by the organization members for 50 cents each.

In addition to publishing the Blue Key Directory, members served as ushers for "The Messiah" choral program on December 2, and for the Miss LaBelle Pageant held March 14.

Being an honor society, Blue Key has the top scholars and student leaders in its ranks. Its membership requirements are a 2.5 grade point average, involvement in at least three campus activities or organizations, and recommendation by an active member. The ideals of Blue Key are leadership, service to McNeese, intellectual achievement, belief in God, and support of the ideals of the United States of Amer-

Having such active students involved in a single campus organization makes Blue Key one of the most prestigious and honored organizations on the McNeese campus.

A Little Something Extra

In addition to the usual marching and playing expected from a marching band, the "Pride of Louisiana" added singing, dancing, and even whistling to their half-time shows. Led by Drum Major Steve Schoppert and Assistant Drum Major Bryan Elliot, songs such as Manhattan Transfer's "Why Not" featured a 190-member dance routine and jazz scatting while "Big Noise from Winnetka" had band members whistling and rifle line members dancing with the Cowgirl Kickers.

The choreography and "voice training" for these shows started in late August at band "Round-up". This consisted of reviewing marching fundamentals and learning the first of three shows. Vocal and instrumental music was memorized and dance steps and marching routines were learned.

Other songs featured by the band included "All Night Long", "Old Man River", "Malaguena" and "You'll Never Walk Alone".

Auxiliary leaders for the "Pride of Louisiana" were Flag Captains Mandy Rogers and Teresa Miller, Rifle Captains Brian Daughdril and Darryl Cole, and feature Twirler/Captain Patty Reeves. Drum line captains were John Weaver and Nelson LeDoux. Band Council members included Katie Batchelor, President; Dawne Pitts, Vice President; Katy DeVille, Secretary/Treasurer; Jill Benton, Senator; Holly Powers, Freshman Representative; Juan Gonzalez, Kat Sanner, and Ron Seiford.

Selected to an elite group of ten college wind bands, the Wind Ensemble, conducted by Dr. David Waybright, traveled to Boulder, Colorado, to participate in the 23rd College Band Director's National Association Conference February 28 to March 3. The 45-member group performed in concert in Macky Auditorium at the University of Colorado Friday, March 1. This performance featured the premiere of two pieces for wind ensembles, "Colors and Contours" by Leslie Bassett and "Symphony for Winds" by Keith Gates. The program was completed with "Rocky Point Holiday" by Ron Jolivet. The latter piece featured Dr. Michael Ewald on trumpet and Mr. Larry Lang as conductor.

The Jazz Ensembles played award-winning music and featured two guest artists, pianist Frank Mantooth and euphonium soloist, Rich Matteson.

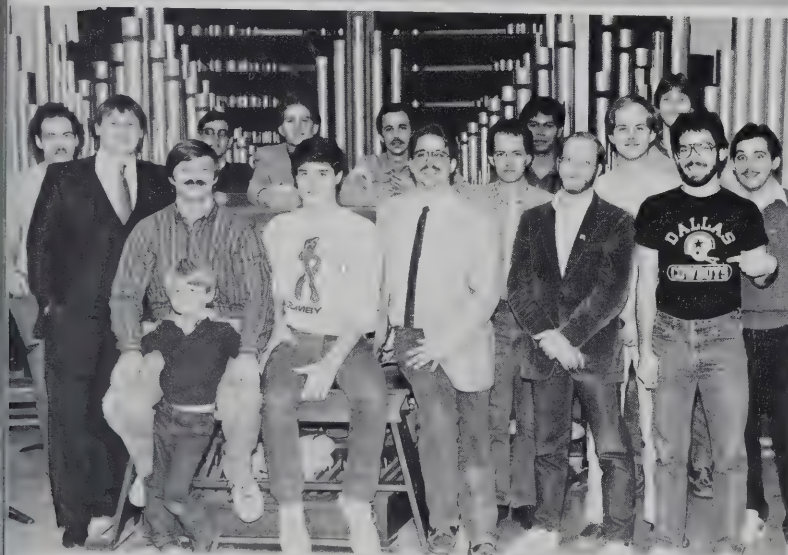

The ensembles competed in the Sam Houston State University Jazz festival on March 23 and the One O'Clock Concert

Jazz Ensemble received straight superior ratings. The Four O'Clock Jazz Ensemble received an excellent rating.

Pianist Frank Mantooth performed with the jazz bands in the fall. He accompanied the groups on "Bad Burn in Poteau" and "That Old Black Magic". Some of the other charts performed were "Fly Me to the Moon", "God Bless the Child", "Sackbut City", and "Latin Schizophrenia".

The Jazz Ensembles hosted a high school jazz festival with bands from Louisiana, Texas, and Oklahoma competing. The high point of the festival was the Jazz Ensemble's Concert featuring Rich Matteson.

The Basketball Pep Band tried to "be a little crazy" at the home games. They accomplished this with help from the "referees", the "Blues Brothers", inspirational banners and a wide variety of music. This 30-member group performed such songs as Chaka Khan's "I Feel For You", Lionel Richie's "Running With The Night", Ray Parker Jr.'s "Ghostbusters", "Three Blind Mice" (dedicated to the referees), "The Flintstones Theme" and local favorite, "Joli Blon". This "group of crazies" was directed (and barely restrained) by Mr. Larry Lang, Assistant Director of Bands.

...And It Takes -Unity-

With over 400 participants, McNeese University's Greek organizations play an important role in the life of the community, representing tradition, integrity, and unity to their members. Fraternities and sororities offer a life-long commitment, and special bonds of friendship.

Service to both the university and community are among the local benefits generated by each fraternity and sorority. In addition, each organization provides a special service to its national philanthropy. The McNeese Greek system calls forth the highest ideals for the development of individual and civic responsibility, as well as for lasting relationships. With such unity among themselves, the Greeks have what it takes to be a special part of a growing university.

With representatives from all social fraternities and sororities, the IFC and Panhellenic councils are Chi Omega, Delta Sigma Theta, Phi Mu, and Zeta Phi Beta.

Programs, policies and activities that affect all sororities are established and conducted by this governing board.

Prospective members are introduced to sorority life during Rush. During this busy time, sororities entertained rushees at a series of social functions and Panhellenic Council worked very hard to promote the ideals of sorority life and to bring together the members of all member groups. Activities included a Rush workshop, a Rush Counseling program, a Christmas party for the clients of the Calcasieu Parish Women's Shelter, participation in Greek Week and Campus Beautification, and development of a Rush recruiting brochure.

The Interfraternity Council at McNeese is composed of representatives of the six social fraternities on campus: Alpha Phi Alpha, Kappa Alpha Order, Kappa Sigma, Phi Beta Sigma, Pi Kappa Phi, and Tau Kappa Epsilon.

The Council is composed of two representatives appointed by each fraternity to serve for one year. An executive committee is elected at the end of the fall semester.

The purpose of the IFC is to establish good interfraternal relationships among the member groups, to encourage a wholesome atmosphere for the continuation of the fraternal system on the McNeese campus and to promote the ideals of brotherhood upon which all fraternities are fundamentally based. Accomplishments within the last year included publishing the Freshman Record and active participation in Greek Week and Fall Rush.

Come Alive

Cheerleaders, debaters, Cowgirl Kickers, and Panhellenic officers are but a few of many members who compose the Alpha Delta Pi sorority. These young women are a close-knit group with high academic and social standards; a group whose pride is echoed on the McNeese campus.

The Alpha Delta Pi's believe strongly in the word "sisterhood." This bond enables them to work as an active unit, both on campus and throughout the community. The Ronald McDonald Home is this sorority's special interest project, and the young women work diligently in their effort to aid this organization.

But, of course, it is not all work and no play in the sorority. The Alpha's enjoy sponsoring a number of social activities that promote "old fashioned fun!" Their annual parties includes Space Chase, Snowball, and last, but not least, the Bayou Bash.

Alpha Delta Pi is on the move at McNeese. They're proud; and it shows!

Whether they're collecting for Sickle Cell or having a "stomp" in the Ranch, the AKA's are always

On the Move

Having the distinction of being the oldest sorority for black professional women, Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority was first established at Howard University on January 15, 1908. Since that date, membership in the sorority has grown to span one ocean and two continents. Alpha Kappa Alpha now boasts chapters in the United States, the Bahamas, Liberia, U.S. Virgin Islands, and West Africa.

The Zeta Pi chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority at McNeese received its charter on December 5, 1971. The Alpha Kappa Alpha's have continued to support McNeese State University and the community of Lake Charles by donating their assistance to the Battered Women's Shelter, NAACP, the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation, and the Foreman-Reynaud YMCA.

Beginning a new tradition was also on the agenda of the sorority as the sisters planned and participated in the first annual AKA week. On Monday, March 4, a Greek Collaboration was held in the Para Ballroom to attract students to the Greek system, while Tuesday, the fifth, a step show was performed by the Alpha Kappa Alpha sisters in the Old Ranch. Students, as well as members of the community, attended the nationally touring Ebony Fashion Fair, which was located in the McNeese Main Auditorium. The week of events ended on Friday, March 8, with the first annual Mr. AKA Pageant, which was won by Todd McArthur, a senior health and physical education major from Lake Charles. Generosity for community was seen as the Alpha Kappa Alpha sisters donated all proceeds from AKA week to local black organizations.

Through working together for the betterment of black women the sisters of Alpha Kappa Alpha have formed a strong bond of sisterhood and the belief that this bond, like democracy for all, should constantly be sought.

Shining Examples

Ever since its founding on April 5, 1895, at the University of Arkansas, Chi Omega has been one of the nation's largest sororities for women which stresses high scholarship, friendship and participation. Currently there are over 170 national chapters and 300 alumnae groups. The Phi Zeta Chapter of Chi Omega at McNeese was established on January 25, 1959. In the past 26 years, the Phi Zetas have become one of the largest and most prestigious sororities on our campus.

Chi Omegas are noted for their individuality. Each member adds her touch to the organization; and yet as each member is different, there is a warm bond of friendship that fosters sisterhood.

The Phi Zetas have had a fun and exciting year which began with a very successful Rush. This year, the Chi O's met quota and pledged 34 girls. Also, the Chi O's have enjoyed such activities as sack lunches, slumber parties, fraternity exchanges, church, Greek Week, and social gatherings with parents, teachers, and alumnae. The Phi Zetas have participated civically by visiting the children's wing at local hospitals during Halloween, attending the Panhellenic Christmas Party at the Calcasieu Women's Shelter, and being runners for the Special Olympics Campaign. The Chi O's also enjoyed an elaborate Spring Formal with the theme of "Love on the High Seas." All pledges, new initiates, and the newly elected president were presented.

The Phi Zetas are active in nearly every facet of campus. Members can be found in clubs ranging from the Rodeo Club to the McNeese Cowgirl Kickers. In the past year, the Phi Zeta Chapter was honored to have members serve on the Freshman, Homecoming, and Spring Courts. Additionally members have been selected for Who's Who Among American College Students and Epsilon Alpha Epsilon Honor Society.

Being the newest Greek sorority on campus makes Delta Sigma Theta the

New Kid on the Block

Months of waiting did not discourage the spirits of the newest sorority on the McNeese Campus. The Pi Zeta chapter of Delta Sigma Theta sorority became a part of the McNeese Greek system on January 5, 1985. Through the help of the Lake Charles Alumnae of Delta Sigma Theta, the McNeese chapter obtained the fifteen-member charter requirement. Each member had to have 24 semester hours credit and a 2.5 grade point average.

Delta Sigma Theta's goals include admitting career-minded young ladies of outstanding moral character and dedication to sincere public service. These goals have been continued since the founding of the sorority in 1913 on the campus of Howard University in Washington, DC, by 22 educated black women.

Once their charter was official, the Pi Zeta's quickly united to become part of the mainstream of McNeese. To begin the spring semester a dance was held at Sugar Daddy's II followed by other dances and a spaghetti dinner sale to raise funds. Other projects included involvement with Special Olympics and the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation Telethon. An additional activity included "May Week", a selected week in May which stresses the importance of education. The first annual Delta Darling Baby Contest was held in June. All proceeds from these events were used to send McNeese chapter representatives to the National Delta Sigma Theta Convention at Dallas in August.

Beginning the spring semester as a new sorority provided an opportunity for the members to be representatives of Delta Sigma Theta's public motto — "Intelligence is the torch of wisdom."

Always In the Pink

Phi Mu sorority was first established on Wesleyan College at Macon, Georgia, in 1850 by her three founders: Mary Myrick Daniels, Mary Dupont Lines, and Martha Hardaway Redding. The Alpha Upsilon Chapter was first installed at McNeese on March 15, 1958. Phi Mu's three ideals by which the members strive to live are love, honor, and truth. A Phi Mu sister is, above all, to be a lady in every sense of the word. The sorority colors are rose and white, and the sorority flower is the rose carnation. Ladybugs and Pink Panthers — the mascots of this national organization — are what can be seen around the Phi Mu House. The "Washboard Band" is the music of the Phi Mu sisters.

The sisters of Phi Mu are active in various campus organizations such as Student Government Association, Panhellenic Council, EAE Women's Honor Fraternity, McNeese Intramurals, Student Union Board, McNeese Ambassadors, Alpha Lambda Delta, the powerlifting team, and Band, and many other organizations on campus. The Phi Mu's also have participated in the KA softball tournament in which they have taken home the trophy for four years in a row.

The Homecoming float of Phi Mu received first place in this year's competition. The sisters teamed up with KA in the fall to win the State championships in flag football. Ginger Foreman was chosen for Spring Court, and Vickie Myers won the title of Miss LaBelle as well as traveling to New York with Pam Pujol for the nationals in powerlifting. Christy Simmons was elected to the Freshman Court in the fall while Fiel Ferrer was Spring Class Sweetheart of the Kappa Sigma brothers. Ginger Foreman, Karla Hart, Maria Norwood, and Toni Woodhatch were Kappa Sigma Star and Crescents. Cathy Nicholas was chosen to be a member of Kappa Alpha's Rose Court.

Phi Mu's activities for the year included Special Olympics, Greek Week, Project Hope street drive and lunch auction, a Christmas party for the area women's shelter, toy boxes for the hospitals, campus beautification, McDonald's Easter Egg Hunt, and various other activities within the campus community.

The annual formal, "Winter Wonderland," was the highlight of the spring semester.

For distributing food to the needy and entertaining at the Women's Shelter Christmas party, the Zeta Phi Beta's are known for

Standing Out in a Crowd

Zeta Phi Beta Sorority was organized at Howard University on January 16, 1920 by two members of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity — Charles Robert Taylor and Langston Taylor. Thus, Zeta Phi Beta, along with Phi Beta Sigma became the first official Greek letter brother and sister organization. Zeta was the first black sorority in the city of Lake Charles and on the McNeese campus.

The objectives of finer womanhood, sisterly love, scholarship, and service have brought many women together all across the country and in many parts of the world. These women have similar tastes and potential for the highest attainments. Zetas take part in community relief work, participate in voluntary services, contribute to organized charity, and grant scholarships and fellowships to deserving female students. "Starks Nest" is one of Zeta's well-known national projects. Here an expectant mother can obtain necessities for her newborn child.

Zeta has sponsored a number of projects both on campus and in the community. During the fall semester, Zeta had a Beauty Clinic on campus and a Debutante's Tea and Ball. Additionally, Zeta worked with the Salvation Army in providing food and clothing for a local family. Two food baskets were also distributed during Thanksgiving and Christmas. The young women donated their time during the Christmas holidays at the Women's Shelter Christmas Party. This spring, Zeta sponsored a Talent Show, a Blood Pressure Drive and a raffling of a box of Valentine Candy. Zeta also participated in the Special Olympics and gave an Easter basket of food to a local family.

Going for the Gold

April 23, the official beginning of Greek Week for 1985, brought the Greek organizations together for competition against each other in activities ranging from volleyball to blindman football. This week of contests was designed to determine the number one fraternity and sorority in athletic events.

The week began with the Greek Extravaganza held in Para Ballroom, where Zeta Phi Beta stepped their way into first in the sorority division, with Delta Sigma Theta placing second, and Alpha Delta Pi coming in third. In the fraternity division, Alpha Phi Alpha stomped into first place. Although the Alpha's were the only entry in the fraternity division, their nationally ranked team put on a show to end all shows.

Activities continued on Wednesday in the Rec Complex with the Greek mile, blind volleyball, and raft races. Winners in volleyball included Phi Mu, first; Alpha Kappa Alpha, second; and Chi Omega, third. Pi Kappa Phi spiked their way into first place among the fraternities with Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha following close behind.

into first place in the raft races with Chi Omega in second and Alpha Delta Pi in third. In the frat swim Loren Horman showed his strength by leading the Pi Kappas to first with Kappa Sigma and Kappa Alpha placing second and third, respectively.

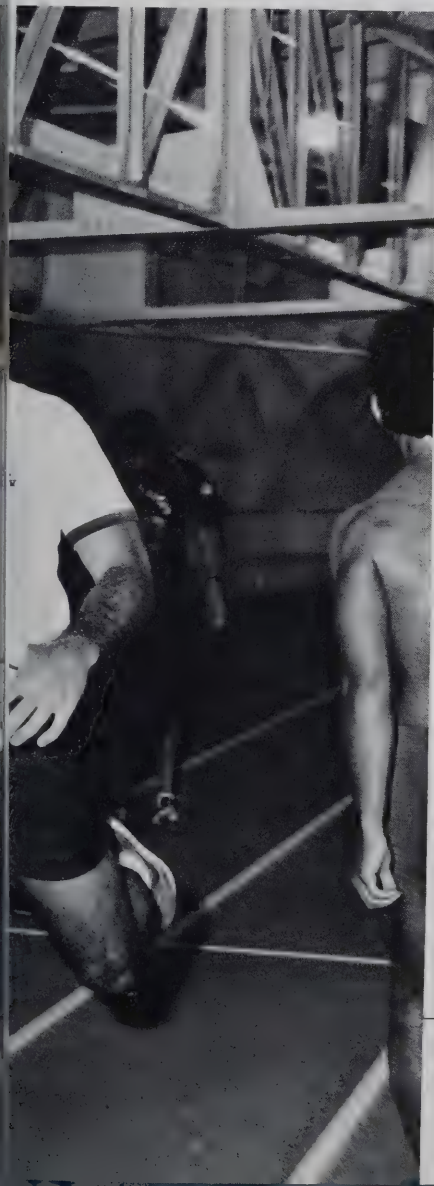

Lillian Hines led Alpha Delta Pi into first place in the mile race with Phi Mu placing second. In the fraternity division, Kappa Sigma raced into first with Kappa Alpha and Pi Kappa Phi running a close second and third.

Thursday brought about the highpoint of the week of the Greek games. The activities of the day consisted of tug-o-war, blind football, egg toss, chariot races, caterpillar races, and the human pyramid building contest. The organizations who entered were kept in suspense until the next day when the overall winners were announced.

Awards from the games were presented Friday at the annual Spring Fling activities held at Burton Coliseum. In the overall sorority division Phi Mu placed first with Alpha Delta Pi following a close second and Chi Omega placing third. Pi Kappa Phi walked away with overall first in the fraternity division, while Kappa Sigma followed in second and Kappa Alpha placed third.

Following a week of thrilling and tense competition, the Greek organizations showed their unity by joining in the awards celebration on Friday, bringing the 1985 Greek Week to an end.

Sponsoring the Miss Essence Pageant and supporting various charitable organizations puts the Alpha Phi Alpha's

In the Limelight

Founded with goals of offering community service, scholarship, and providing love to all mankind, Alpha Phi Alpha has continued to prosper since its inception at Cornell University, Ithaca, New York, on December 4, 1906. This was a history making date as Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity, Incorporated became the first black Greek letter fraternity to serve as a social organization. Continuing the precedent of excellence, service, and brotherly love set by distinguished alumnae Thurgood Marshall, Jesse Owens, and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the Theta Theta Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha was established at McNeese State University in 1973.

Aided by their auxiliary group, the Alpha Angels, the Alpha Phi Alpha brothers devote themselves to providing their time and service to the Sickle Cell Anemia Telethon, NAACP, American Heart Association Drive, Thanksgiving Holiday Spirit Drive, and the Calcasieu Hope Center.

The fraternity's major project, the annual Miss Essence pageant, was held during the spring semester. Claiming the honors of Miss Essence 1985 was Stacy Smith, a freshman majoring in early childhood education. Alpha Phi Alpha also sponsored Smith in the Miss McNeese LaBelle Pageant where she received recognition for her talent as a singer.

Dedication to tradition is a characteristic that Alpha Phi Alpha continues as a part of its program. Pledges can still be designated by the black and gold sphinx pendants, symbols of the brothers. It is the manner in which Alpha Phi Alpha uses the traditional drills and tests during initiations that adds to the appeal of the fraternity as well as the McNeese campus.

Sponsoring the annual "Old South" week with the ideas of respect and love for God and womanhood has helped Kappa Alpha to continue a

Southern Tradition

Founded October 14, 1969, on the McNeese campus, the Delta Xi Chapter of Kappa Alpha Order is a social fraternity rich in Old South tradition and heritage.

Their Southern roots date back to the Civil War era when their spiritual father, General Robert E. Lee, excelled in the battlefields of the South. This quest for excellence is echoed throughout the Kappa Alpha Order — excellence in academics, community service, and individual achievement.

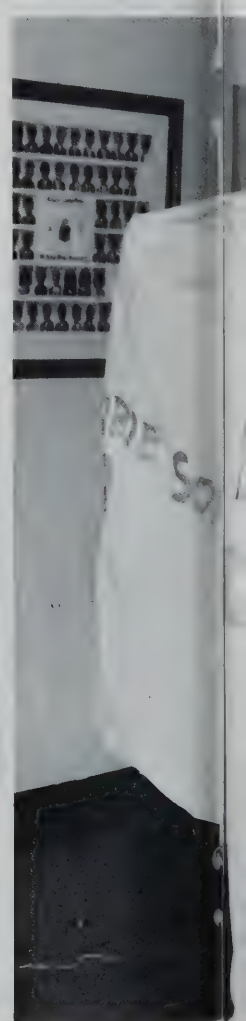

The southern gentlemen of KA also firmly believe in the phrase, "Southern hospitality." The fraternity is the host of many social events, which include an annual softball tournament and Grande Manger. Kappa Alpha ended the spring semester with the traditional "Old South Week." April 13-20 gave rise to "Old South '85." Events which highlighted the festivities were a fishing tournament, a golf tournament, a Hawaiian party at North Beach, Casino Night at the KA mansion, and a brotherhood night. On April 19, Kappa Alpha "seceded" from McNeese and on April 20, "Old South '85" concluded with a lawn party at the house of "Spook" Stream and the Old

South Ball.

But above all, Kappa Alpha is a fraternity with strong beliefs — belief in God, belief in family, and a belief in serious respect and love for womanhood.

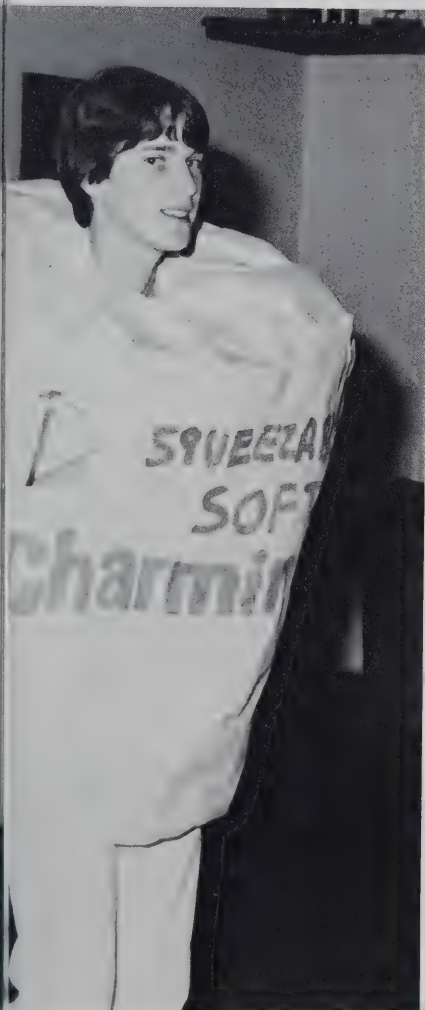

Remember, Southern chivalry is not dead; it is alive and well in KA!

Always Up to Something

Kappa Sigma International traces her lineage back to the early 1400's in Bologna, Italy where the order was first started. It spread through the European Universities until the Renaissance, then it lay dormant for several centuries. An American college student rediscovered the order and introduced it to the University of Virginia at Charlottesville on December 10, 1869. The American Kappa Sigma was founded with the beliefs and tradition of the earlier European order. Kappa Sigma has chapters on 212 campuses around the U.S. and Canada.

The Theta Rho chapter of Kappa Sigma at McNeese was founded in 1966. It has grown to be the largest and most active fraternity on campus. Theta Rho's members are active and hold office in many campus organizations: SUB, SGA, Student Senate, Circle K, Rotary, ROTC, Pre-Med Society, Accounting Society, Blue Key National Honor Fraternity, and many others. Two of the past four Mr. McNeese's and three of the last five SGA presidents have been Kappa Sigma's.

Kappa Sigma works in the community as well, playing a major role in the Sailors Make Good Neighbors campaign, Kidney Foundation, and also contributing $1,500 to the American Cancer Society. Each year Theta Rho sponsors the biggest party on campus, the annual South Seas Party.

The Kappa Sigma Brotherhood builds leaders under the beliefs in the imporance of God, country, and education.

Leaps and Bounds

With a membership now totalling more than 65,000 people, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Incorporated was founded in 1914 at Howard University in Washington, DC. Six years later, through the efforts of the Phi Beta Sigma brotherhood, Zeta Phi Beta sorority was formed at the same university. This union is the only true brother/sister fraternity alliance in existence.

McNeese saw this union in the spring of 1982 when the Xi Eta chapter of Phi Beta Sigma joined Zeta Phi Beta sorority on campus with founding members including Donald Ceasar, Murphy Fusilier, and Arstille Villery. Committed to academic excellence, service for humanity, and brotherhood, the brothers provide two academic scholarships through the Phi Beta Sigma Education Foundation. Along with annual projects that assisted the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation, United Negro College Fund, Black History Society, Special Olympics, and NAACP, the Xi Etas also held a Greek extravaganza and step show in the McNeese Main Auditorium to celebrate the beginning of the 1984 fall semester. The Phi Beta Sigma Founders Day was commemorated with a display in the Student Union and a step show in the Old Ranch.

After football player Simon Jordan was injured in a car accident, the Phi Beta Sigma brothers constructed a giant get-well card which was sent to Jordan. A smoker was held in the spring semester, which allowed regional and national fraternity directors to observe the activities of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity on the McNeese campus. Spring semester activities ended with participation in Greek Week, which was planned under the supervision of Phi Beta Sigma Interfraternity Council representative, Donald Ceasar.

Having won the award for the highest GPA among men's social fraternities for the last five years, the Pi Kappa Phi's are

Making the Grade

On December 10, 1904, Pi Kappa Phi was founded in Charleston, South Carolina. On October 29, 1955, the Beta Mu chapter of Pi Kappa Phi became the first national fraternity at McNeese. In the fall of 1984, the Beta Mu brothers moved to their new house on Common Street.

Pi Kappa Phi prides itself on community service, promotion of loyalty, honor, friendship, and academic achievement. For the past five years, the Pi Kapps have won the award for having the highest overall G.P.A. in the men's social fraternity division.

Fund raisers are held by the brothers to raise money for PUSH (Play Units for the Severely Handicapped). This national endeavor has made great contributions in aiding the severely handicapped to adapt to their environment. The Pi Kapps also participate in the Heart Fund and the Louisiana Blood Center's blood drive. A keg of beer was won by the brothers for donating the most units of blood during the fall blood drive.

In addition to community service, the Beta Mu's also hold many social events such as sorority exchanges and their bi-annual air-band concerts. Some special events are Founder's Day dinner and the spring formal, Rose Ball. Each year a lady attending McNeese is selected as the Pi Kappa Phi Rose. Rose for 1984 was Pauline Lantz, a junior from Iota.

Unity among fraternity members is very important to the Pi Kappa Phi brothers who use this unity for service to the McNeese Campus and community.

Continuously Growing

A progressive fraternity, Tau Kappa Epsilon has more than two hundred and eighty-five campus chapters with over eleven thousand active fraters, making it the largest international fraternity in the world.

Epsilon Psi, the McNeese colony of TKE, has made substantial progress this past year by almost tripling its active chapter size and by participating in the largest single initiation ever held by Tau Kappa Epsilon in December of 1984 at USL.

Other major accomplishments include the brotherhood award given to the chapter showing the highest values of charity, love, and esteem in a ten state region and having fraters in the offices of president and treasurer on the Interfraternity Council. Projects slated for the year include a shopping spree and keg party raffles, assistance to the Biology Department in conducting the McNeese District Science Fair, and assistance to the Muscular Dystrophy Association and Heart Fund drives.

Epsilon Psi is a growing colony of Tau Kappa Epsilon, a fraternity with a tradition of excellence.

...And It Takes -Competition-

Competition with other universities receives support from both the students and faculty of McNeese. Heated battles provide the center for sports fans to channel their spirit and loyalty to the university's athletic programs. The triumphant touchdown, the last goal, the final yard, and the winning ace all provoke rousing cheers and applause for the efforts of the McNeese athletes. Unity is evident among the fans, the players, and the coaching staff of McNeese; each yearning for victory with zest and determination.

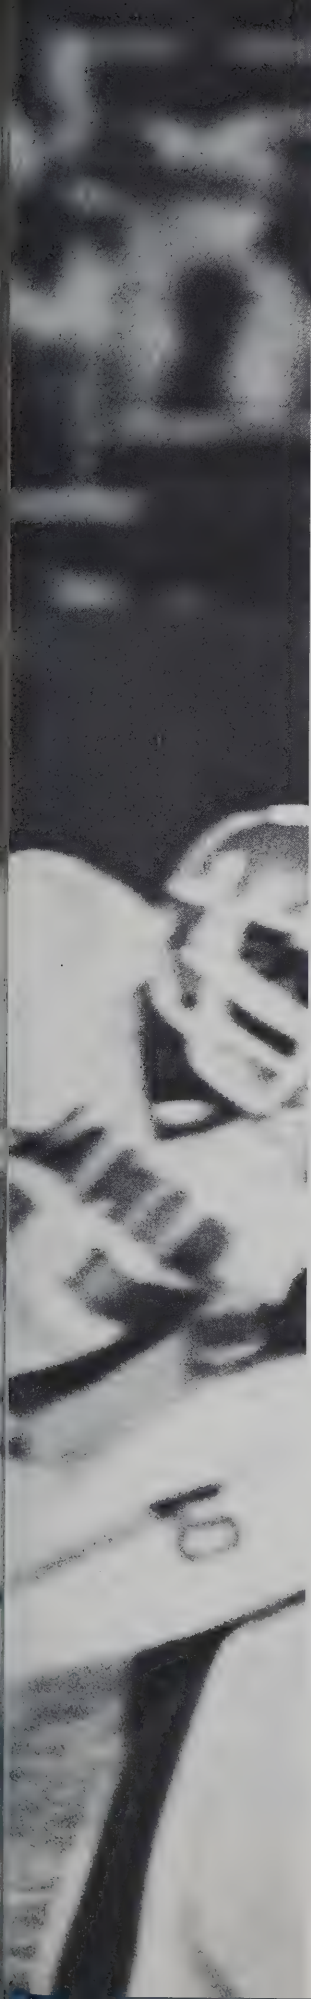

In addition to organized sports, McNeese offers a variety of unorganized recreational activities through the Intramural Program. Within this program, fans can become a part of the action as contenders in games of sport that are exciting, fun, and strenuous. Whether the athletics are organized or unorganized, McNeese has what it takes to be tops in competition.

Ending the season with a 7-3-1 record proved the Pokes were

Cowboy Tough

McNeese entered its second year of the McCann era with an impressive start, winning the first four games and occupying the AP 1-AA top ten for several weeks.

The fast start for the Cowboys wasn't the only interesting development in the 1984 season. The United States Supreme Court played a big part. When the NCAA television package was torn apart by the high court, NCAA 1-AA institutions, like McNeese, lost guarantees of not only network television exposure, but guarantees of the revenue generated by the NCAA-network deals. For McNeese, the loss came to about $100,000 annually. According to athletic director Ernie Duplchin the money would have to be made up through the reduction of scholarships and cutting back of other expenses.

McNeese did, however, get two doses of TV exposure through a regional network out of Austin, Texas that produced a SLC "Game of the Week" package.

The Cowboys opened the season September 1 at home with a 17-14 victory against the Northwestern Demons on a hot, humid evening before a crowd of about 18,500.

The Cowboys had trouble moving against a stingy Demon defense in the early going as the visitors held McNeese to only one first down in the first quarter. It took a Flip Johnson punt return to the Demon 25 to spark the Cowboys to their first touchdown of the season, a four yard keeper by Don Richards. Richards' run capped a five play drive, which was highlighted by Simon Jordon's 17-yard jaunt.

Bob Savoie picked off a Demon pass with about a minute left in the half and returned it for an apparent touchdown, but a clipping call moved the ball back to the MSU 45. From there, a 20-yard pass completion to Keith Ortego and a 20-yard run by Jordon set up a 31-yard Tony Whittington field goal with :03 left on the clock.

Richards again found paydirt in the third quarter in a drive that was aided by a 33-yard Richards-to-Ortego connection. Whittington's PAT gave the Cowboys a 10-point lead midway through the third quarter.

Northwestern cut that lead to three late in the third when Demon back, John Stevens dove into the endzone from three yards out. That set up a nail-biter of a fourth quarter in which the Cowboy defense came through, allowing the Demons only one first down in shutting down the visitors' offense and preserving the Cowboys' first victory.

The Cowboys' next outing found them at home against a lethargic Southeastern Louisiana team. Ricky Stewart ran for three touchdowns and had his first-ever 100-yard game in leading the Pokes past the Lions by a 28-7 score. Stewart put the Pokes on the board first with a three-yard sweep into the end zone towards the end of the first quarter. His run capped a 15-play, 80 yard drive that was representative of the Cowboy effort that night.

Stewart again showed his stuff a little later in the contest by rambling 64 yards on a draw play for a TD. The play capped a 74-yard drive by the Southeastern flexed some muscle in the second quarter with a 67-yard, 15-play drive which ended with a Charlie Herbert touchdown. That drive was just about the only thing the Lions could manage as two turnovers in the second half sealed their doom.

Pokes.

Jerry Butler, the Lion's star back, fumbled on the first play of the second half with McNeese's Bill Kingery recovering. Seven plays later, Jordan swept into the end zone to up the score to 21-7 with 11:30 left in the third. Stewart again scored with 5:10 left in the third to cap a six-play, 33-yard drive.

The Cowboys traveled to Thibodeaux for their first away game of the season on September 15. The Cowboys struggled with threatening weather and a second half surge by Nicholls State in holding off the hosts for a 24-21 win.

Cowboy Tough

The Cowboys held the despondent Nicholls' offense to 88 yards in the first half and were spotted two first quarter touchdowns, both were keepers by Don Richards.

The first score capped off a 12-play, 65-yard drive. The drive was highlighted by a 20-yard pass completion from Richards to Ortego and a pass interference call in the end zone, which put the ball on the Colonels' two yard line.

The second was set up by a Mark Hamilton interception. The backfield combination of Jordan and Stewart (who had 106 and 135 yards, respectively) carried the Cowboys to the Colonels' four yard line in 10 plays.

The Pokes, as they did the year before, went into a second and third quarter sleep. The Colonels began a comeback that consisted of a safety, a seven yard TD pass from Colonel's Keith Menard to Brian Stropolo, and a successful two-point conversion.

Tony Whittington added to the Pokes' lead with a 46-yard field goal to make the score 17-10. The Colonels answered with a field goal of their own. They seemed to have the flow going their way until Stropolo fumbled a Benny May punt early in the fourth quarter which Tim Hagler recovered. The ensuing drive that stalled at the Nicholls' two went for naught as Whittington missed a 20-yard FG attempt. He again missed from 30 yards away after a Mark Hamilton interception.

Ricky Stewart finally put the game out of reach for the Colonels' with a 62-yard touchdown run to give the Pokes a 10 point buffer with only a few minutes left in the game.

The Pokes were on the road again the next week to Canyon, Texas to face West Texas State. The 24-7 score wasn't representative of the Cowboys' performance that night. The Pokes piled up 332 yards rushing and 109 passing against West Texas; yet, they only had 10 first half points to show for their dominance.

After an open date on September 29, the Pokes lost their first Southland Conference game to Louisiana Tech, 24-17 at home.

The Cowboys shook off an early scare in Denton, Texas to down North Texas State 26-7. In that game, which could be called a battle of the generous, the Eagles outgave the Cowboys six turnovers to four and allowed the Pokes to set up drives at the NTS 47, 3, 23, and 47 yard lines.

One would think a last-minute, fourth down and 19 touchdown pass to cap a come-from-behind effort by the Cowboys would be the perfect ending for McNeese's third SLC game.

However, because of a hard-to-handle snap on the ensuing extra point try, the Cowboys had to settle for a 16-16 tie with the Arkansas State Indians in Jonesboro.

The night of October 27 was a night of celebration as Homecoming events leading up to the McNeese-Northeast game had a capacity crowd fired up with high expectations. The crowd left with much less enthusiasm as the Cowboys' hopes of a Southland Conference title were crushed by the Indians' 19-3 win.

Cowboy Tough

The Cowboys then blew a 17-point lead in Arlington, Texas to lose 24-20.

Revenge, sweet revenge. That's what 20,000 plus saw in Cowboy Stadium as the Cowboys rocked USL 30-17.

The Cowboys rode the coat-tails of Simon Jordon's 169-yard rushing performance and Keith Ortego's circus catches as the Pokes upped their record to 6-3-1 against the 1-A Cajuns. Ortego grabbed five aerals for 100 yards.

After a first half highlighted by a Tony Hunt touchdown on an early Poke drive, a 45-yard pass completion from Richards to Ortego, and a last-second field goal by Tony Whittington, the Pokes went to the locker room with a slim 9-6 lead.

In the second half the Pokes came out like a team determined to erase any memories of last year's humiliating 48-16 defeat in Lafayette.

Jordan racked up 67 yards of a 72-yard drive that ended with his 3-yard touchdown run with 11:30 left in the third quarter. His longest run of the night, a 50-yard trip through the heart of the Cajun offense, was destined to be etched in the highlight film hall of fame.

That drive was followed with another Poke scoring thrust that ended with a seven-yard alley-oop pass in the corner of the endzone from Richards to Ortego that upped the score to 23-6 midway through the third quarter.

Jordan scored again in the fourth quarter to put the game out of reach on a 12-yard run to up the score to 30-9.

The Cajuns responded with an aerial onslaught to score their only touchdown of the evening. To USL's credit, their quarterback, Donnie Wallace, riddled the Poke secondary with 253 yards worth of passes. That was enough to prevent the Pokes' secondary from being the top pass defense unit in 1-AA.

"We finished the year as a good football team," said Coach John McCann after his Cowboys knocked off the Lamar Cardinals in Cowboy Stadium 34-14.

The Pokes as a whole chalked up 438 yards in total offense, 220 on the ground and 218 in the air, winning their final conference game of 1984. The win left the Cowboys with a 7-3-1 mark, 2-3-1 in the Southland Conference.

For the Cardinals, it was a night to forget as they gift wrapped eight turnovers, six by interception and two by fumble. Besides McArthur's three steals, Joey Granger picked off two on the night.

Lamar received some respectability with a 55-yard drive that ended with a 5-yard George Landry run. The Cardinals followed with a 73-yard bomb from Brent Watson to Rodney Clay to bring Lamar within 13 points with less than 10 minutes remaining.

But the Pokes put the game out of reach as Subester Brooks quarterbacked the Pokes' final drive of the season, highlighted by a 49-yard catch-and-run from Brooks to flanker Flip Johnson. Reserve fullback Jeff Bryant capped off the Cowboy scoring for the season with a two-yard run.

Domination

The basketball team's 1984-85 season has to be considered one of the best in the history of the university. Not only did the team finish with an 18-10 overall record, but it also won second in the Southland Conference, and featured one of the nation's top seniors.

Joe Dumars, considered by many to be the top guard in the nation, was the squad's pacesetter. He was capably supported by other players such as seniors Chris Hardin and Guy McInnis, juniors Girard Harmon and Kenny Jimereson, and sophomores Jerome Batiste and George Kears.

The entire complement of players included senior John Wesley and freshmen Grant Westerchil, Quinten Cotton, Elroi Simon, James Cain and Jody Frey.

From an inauspicious start — with both Dumars and Batiste sidelined with broken bones — the Cowboys went on to be one of the most winning teams in the South over the last two months of play.

Beginning in January — with both Dumars and Batiste healthy once again — the Cowboys won 15 of their last 20 games, climaxing the season by competing as the second-place team in the Southland Conference tournament.

Even more impressive was the fact that with both Dumars and Batiste in the starting line up, the Cowboys were 13-4 for the year.

During the course of the season several firsts came the Cowboy's way; and but for a layup here, a rebound there, McNeese might be enjoying time in the SLC trophy-room right now.

The Cowboys finished only two games in back of league champion Louisiana Tech. Two of McNeese's three league losses came at the hands of the Bulldogs — the title clinched on a last-second tip-in by the Bulldogs in a 59-58 victory in Ruston.

The regular season found the Cowboys sweeping series from such staunch rivals as Lamar and SW Louisiana, and at two different times putting together five-game winning streaks.

Also, of the ten losses McNeese absorbed, five came at the hands of teams that competed in the NCAA tournament and four were to opponents in the final Associated Press Top Twenty Poll.

Because Dumars and Batiste were both sidelined with broken bones for the Nov. 27 season opener, the year's start was suspect at best. The result was an 18 point loss to Southern Mississippi.

Dumars made it back for the next game and began to take charge, but in the month of December, McNeese's record read three victories and five losses.

In January, the Cowboys began to pick up steam. The six-foot nine-inch Batiste was still sidelined but Hardin, Kears, Jimereson and McInnis began to pick up the slack.

The team went on a five-game winning streak, and when Batiste did rejoin the squad — January 5 — the Pokes were in high gear.

The final two victories of that early winning streak were triumphs on the road against Arkansas State and Lamar.

Batiste was to re-injure his foot once again January 31. He was not to return until February 16. But, during that stretch the Cowboys ran off four victories, three of them in league games.

At the end of the regular season McNeese was as strong as any team in the South, polishing off Lamar in overtime, taking the measure of North Texas State by 19 points, and cracking the century mark against Texas-Arlington.

It was fitting that at the end of the regular season, the NCAA's computer power-ranking listed the Cowboys as playing the 46th toughest schedule in the nation, the highest mark of any Southland or Louisiana school.

Also during the year Dumars became the most decorated basketball player in the university's history, and for his endeavors, he had the honor of having his jersey number retired.

No one will ever again wear Dumars' No. 4 just as no one will again wear the No. 33 that All-American Bill Reigel wore (1954-56), or the No. 34 of Frank Glenn (1954-57) or the No. 25 of Stan Kernan (1957-

Dumars' talent lay not only in putting the ball into the hoop, but also in playing the full "94" foot game, being equally adept as a ball handler and a defensive player.

That's one of the reasons representatives of 15 professional teams were on hand one day in January in the Lake Charles Civic Center to watch him put on his show.

All scouts projected him as a first round draft selection by the NBA; many of them determined that he would be the first guard taken.

Throughout the season, Dumars pitched in the points, drawing raves from fans, coaches and sportswriters.

"He's one of the best guards our conference has ever seen and one of the best we've ever played against," were the comments of Lamar's Pat Foster.

And, Jerry West, the general manager of the Los Angeles Lakers said, "I can see that Dumars is exceptionally talented. He plays with intelligence and has almost unlimited potential."

Sportswriter John James Marshall of the Shreveport Journal said, "For those of you who have never seen McNeese State's Joe Dumars play, here's the scouting report: The guy can shoot."

Shoot . . . Joe did during the season as he became the all-time leading scorer in McNeese history, moved into second place on the all-time Southland Conference scoring chart, into seventh place on the all-time Louisiana career chart and into tenth place on the all-time NCAA scoring list.

He finished his four-year

Cowboy career with 2,605 points, an average of 22.5 per game for his playing time.

During his senior year Dumars pitched in 25.8 points per game, good enough for fourth nationally, and good enough to win his third Southland Conference scoring title. He also set league records in free throws attempted, and made and set school records in these departments as well as for games played and field goals made and attempted.

The honors which came his way were many, and included honorable mention on the Associated Press' all-American listing, the Outstanding Player Award from the Southland Conference, a fourth straight all-SLC berth, a place on the all-Louisiana team and selection to the coaches' District 8 first team and to the Basketball Weekly All-Plains squad.

He was also picked to play in the Aloha Classic and in the Hall of Fame Classic.

At different junctures during the season, Dumars' support crew also pulled its load. Three other players averaged points in double figures with Jimerson hitting 13.1, Batiste 12.1 and Hardin 10.3.

din also won his second straight team rebound title with an 8.4 mark and placed second in the SLC. Harmon was the league's assistant kingpin with an average right at seven per game.

SLC squad.

The only sour note of the entire season was the fact that when post-season bids went out, the Cowboys were left in the dark. McNeese wasn't in the running for a NCAA bid but the NIT was another case since the Cowboys were one of the first to be considered.

And, the only reason the Cowboys were taken off the board by the NIT was because McNeese couldn't host a first-round game, having no arena in which to play.

A bid would have certainly put the icing on a season that was one of the best in the school's history.

With only one returning starter and and inexperienced squad, the 1985 team did their best in

Picking Up the Pieces

There were many new beginnings for the McNeese Cowgirls prior to the 1984-85 basketball season.

First came the hiring of a new coach. Early in August Mike Fountain from Hardin-Jefferson High School in Sour Lake, TX, was named.

A 12-year veteran of the prep ranks, Fountain's task was to build and mold the Cowgirl program back to contender status.

There were obstacles to overcome: the departure of four starters from the previous year, and the lack of opportunities for recruiting.

What seemed an impossible task was turned into a rallying point. Each member of the squad was determined to make 1984-85 a successful season.

"No one was giving us a chance for a good season," Fountain said. "They said we had lost too much the previous year to do anything. Our girls took that as a challenge to prove everybody wrong."

There was only one returning starter, but she was a good one around which to build the foundation. Pam Booker, a junior from Beaumont, TX, was the team's second leading scorer a year ago with a 13.0 average. She was considered a scoring machine, lacking only in playing experience.

Fountain sent 6-0 junior college transfer Donna Berrett into the middle with freshmen, Kim Turner (6-0) at forward and Dorothy Briscoe (5-6) at point guard.

The fifth starter, junior Cathy Griffen (5-10), came back after a year's layoff from knee surgery.

Those five formed the nucleus for the season. Bench strength came from guards Pam LaFosse and Lucretia

Simpson and inside help from Kris LeDoux (5-10) and Keri Weston (6-1).

What awaited the Cowgirls was a 28-game slate including nationally-ranked South Alabama and Northeast Louisiana. (The latter would climb to No. 2 in the national rankings by season's end.)

"It's going to take us time to develop as a team since none of the five have played together before," Fountain said. "We also have to worry about our depth because we are thin at every position."

Fountain's concern over depth became a reality when LeDoux went down with a knee injury the fourth game of the season, and was out for the remainder of the year.

The Cowgirls played the remainder of the season with just eight players on the roster. Before it ended McNeese gave new meaning to the term, "a 40-minute player".

The Cowgirls began slowly, dropping a season-opening contest to Stephen F. Austin on the road 63-57. The next time out, however, the Cowgirls registered their first win, a 90-56 decision over West Florida in Pensacola.

Three straight losses followed the West Florida victory, and as McNeese prepared for its next home contest against Southwest Texas, Fountain's concerns about depth became paramount.

In all three losses — to New Orleans, South Alabama and Northwestern Louisiana — the Cowgirls had built comfortable halftime leads only to see them disappear in the second half as McNeese ran out of gas.

Upgraded practices with more and more concentration on running began to strengthen McNeese for the heart of its schedule and the Cowgirls put together back-to-back wins for the first time with victories over Southwest Texas and Sam Houston State.

With those wins it was also beginning to become apparent who the scorers were — Booker and Barrett. Both led, Booker ahead with 20.4 average followed by Barrett with 18.6. Also in the scoring chase was Turner who got better and better as the season progressed, averaging 12.9 points per game by season's end.

Barrett's rebounding was another plus. She controlled the inside to average 14.7 rebounds per contest, a figure that would keep her in the top ten nationally.

The depth problem, however, was one the Cowgirls could never quite overcome. Perhaps the most gallant effort of the season came at home against second ranked Northeast Louisiana where the Cowgirls led by as many as ten points with just ten minutes remaining in the contest only to fall in the final minutes 92-76.

Booker put on a clinic in that contest scoring a game high, 33 points, and to show that it was no fluke, she came back two weeks later to score 32 more against Northeast in Monroe.

There was little doubt Booker was headed for All-Southland Conference honors despite the team's final record of 11-17.

When the final game was played Booker was selected to the elite team's first unit.

Booker was not the only Cowgirl awarded, however. Barrett received second team honors, and Briscoe got honorable mention.

"The fact that we had three of our starting five recognized says something for the effort this team gave," said Fountain. "You can't always measure a team's success in wins."

"For this team to get 11 victories was quite an accomplishment under the circumstances," Fountain added. "A lot of people didn't think we could win one game, much less 11. With a little more depth, we might have turned those close losses into wins, too.

"The entire team will be back next season along with new recruits, and we will continue to build until we get back on top."

As a team the Cowgirls averaged 71.2 points per game scoring a season high 93 in a win over North Texas State and averaging 40.9 rebound per outing.

There were also record-setting performances. Briscoe set a record for 141 assists, and Booker made the record-book with 14 straight field goals without a miss. Also Booker had 12 straight free throws which tied later with Barrett's.

Barrett also tied another school record with 25 rebounds against Southwest Texas.

Booker finished the year climbing into the number five slot on the all-time career scoring list with 1,013 points.

Winning the Northeast Louisiana Invitational gave McNeese's Golf Team an

Ace in the Hole

A team with experience would be an accurate description of the McNeese 1984-85 Golf Team. With six of the ten men team returning from last year's squad, the 1984-85 season got underway with a fifth place finish at the University of Southern Mississippi. Winning the Northeast Louisiana Invitational set the pace for the Poke golfers for the remaining season. Led by Tim Holt's fourth place finish, the Pokes took second in the St. Thomas-Angelo Invitational and continued to the Louisiana Intercollegiate tournament to take fourth.

Qualifying rounds for the West Florida Invitationals were held at the Lake Charles Country Club to determine which five McNeese golfers would go to that tournament. Holt, Wauley, Harris, Gabbert, and Brewer received those five valued slots and traveled to Perdido

Bay, Florida to compete.

Keith Harris' third place finish paced the Pokes to a victory in the tournament. "Beating Lamar (who is ranked tenth in the nation) in the Southland Conference Tournament, is our main goal," confided Keith Harris of Baytown, Texas. Harris also said that he feels the team has a good chance with the returning members and the new transfers, Bob Brewer and Billy Gabbert.

Setting the Pace

Coach Bob Hayes' 18 years at McNeese have given him many lasting memories, and 1984 was no exception. The season had a number of exciting moments and outstanding performances.

Cross Country season began in the fall semester with the McNeese Invitational. Robert Stolz, who was an all-SLC performer in 1983, led the Cowboys to a third place finish in the team standings.

Stolz also led the Pokes at the UT-Arlington and Louisiana Tech Invitationals. Other runners who performed for the Cowboys were Enda Coll, Terry Jones, Bill Bradshaw, Nick Eyrich, Kevin Gibson, and Ronald Evans.

One of the best meets for McNeese was at the Northwestern Invitational in Natchitoches. The team finished third with 78 points. Coll placed eighth in the five mile race in 26.42, Bradshaw finished 14th in 28.44, and Jones placed 12th in 28.34.

The Cross Country season ended with a sixth place finish at the SLC meet in Ruston. Stolz again led McNeese with an 11th place finish in 33.07 over the 10,000 meter course.

Brian Cooper, who was ineligible in 1984, charged into the '85 indoor campaign with some record setting performances. At the first meet, the McNeese Invitational, Cooper set a school record by winning the long jump with a leap of 26'11", which qualified him for the NCAA National Indoor Meet. Cooper then finished fourth at nationals and earned All-American honors.

"Although I felt I could've finished higher, I was very happy to be an All-American," said Cooper.

Cooper won the SLC long jump title with a new conference meet record of 25'10½" and finished second in the 60 yard dash with a time of 6.27.

During the indoor campaign several other school records were broken. Freshman Gary Bean, who finished third in the SLC, set the school high jump record with a leap of 7'0". Mark Fisher, who holds the Cowboy outdoor pole vault record, broke the indoor mark by clearing 16'0" and finishing third at the SLC meet.

Senior Robert Gaines shattered the school indoor 400 meter dash record with a 49.0 clocking. Gaines was also on the mile relay team of Arthur DeGray, Williard Taylor, and Reggie Jenkins that placed second in SLC with a new school mark of 3.17.9.

At the SLC Championship Indoor Meet McNeese scored 43 points to place sixth behind defending champion Lamar, 152 points.

"We have a much better team than we showed at conference and we will prove it in the outdoor season," said Hayes.

The outdoor season began with an impressive 90-63 victory over Southeastern. Cooper won four events. Several other members of the team also looked good.

Andrew Porter won a double in his first meet. Porter threw the shot over 50' and the discus over the 150' mark.

Ted Harris, who placed fourth in the SLC meet in 1984, was the top javelin performer for the Pokes with a best of 218'3". Greg Lejuene, 207', and Scott Myers, 200', also helped in the javelin events.

Johnson Brown, a junior college All-American transfer, scored in the steeplechase and ran on the distance medley team of Ronald Evans, Todd Sigaty, and Reggie Jenkins. Sigaty and Evans also ran low 1.50's in the 800 meters. Nick Eyrich helped the distance group with a personal best of 15.21 in the 5,000 meters.

In the high jump, freshman school record holder Gary Bean placed third at the Rice Invitational while Robert Bennett, 6'10", and Charles Landry, 6'10", also helped the Pokes.

Shannon Dougherty came off an injured hamstring to score for McNeese in the high and low hurdles. Shannon also long jumped over 24'.

Freshman Williard Taylor, who missed early meets with injuries, Arthur DeGray, and Kevin Vitatoo ran well enough to score for the Pokes.

With new freshmen in training and experienced transfers, McNeese's 1984 squad brought about

Confidence for the Future

The 1984 season was a rebuilding period for the volleyball team, but head coach Cheryl Manuel felt that the 7-26 Cowgirls still had some bright spots.

Among them were the efforts of Dana Perkins, Sammy Bordelon and transfer Karen Owens. All three played in all of the team's 104 games. Owens led the squad in kills and blocks, while Perkins paced the team in hitting percentage. Quincy Graves' ace average of 3.4 was a team high.

Composed mostly of freshmen, the team lacked experience from the outset, but Manuel pointed out that the sportsmanship and maturity of the young Cowgirls will be a big step toward next year.

"This was a rebuilding year for the Cowgirls," Manuel said, adding, "the foundation has been laid . . . we can expect better results for next year's team."

Upon assuming the head coach position last August, Manuel had little time to recruit experienced players for the season. Since Perkins was the only returning player with on-court experience, the addition of Owens as a transfer was a plus. (Owens had previously played under Manuel at John Ehret High School.)

Highlighting the season standings were two wins apiece against Northwestern and Nicholls, as well as victories over Stephen F. Austin, Southern and Northwestern.

Practicing three times a week as a team and individually proved to be a winning combination for the McNeese Powerlifting team. The Cowboys and Cowgirls attended several competitions in preparation for the national meets held at West Point, New York and at Texas A&M University at College Station.

The United States Powerlifting Federation held their National Collegiate Championships at West Point Military Academy. Representing McNeese at the championships were senior Mike Duhon; juniors Pam Pujol, Vickie Myers, Charlotte Rawson; and sophomores David San Miguel and Mari Eastman. Bringing home All-American honors were Duhon, who finished fifth overall, and Rawson, who took third place honors. Just missing All-American honors with sixth place finishes were Vickie Myers and David San Miguel.

For the Drug Free Nationals held April 13, 1985 at Texas A&M, McNeese captured second place All-American team honors. Duhon set a new national record in the 123lb class with a dead lift of 418lbs, while Tracy LeGros set a national record in the 139lb class with a 159lb benchpress.

Claiming second place in the Southland Conference Tournament, the McNeese Tennis Team is

Taking Advantage

The 1985 tennis season for McNeese State University was very different for the men's and women's teams.

Coach Lee Holland's Cowboys had to replace three All-Southland Conference performers from 1984 in order to challenge for the league crown in '85 while the Cowgirls had to have a new coach in Ann Robique.

Replacing three of the top four players in the Cowboys' lineup was a major task for Holland, but an early signing success brought a pair of talented Swedish players to McNeese. They were Johan Kjellsten and Ulf Persson. Together they eased the pain of the previous year's losses.

These two newcomers along with the return of seniors Robinson Ureta, Anders Osberg, Sergio Villa and Johan Hallin and junior Rodrigo Arenas gave the Pokes the basis of a strong team.

In January McNeese picked up its third recruit of the season in Pontus Lavefalk, another Swede who in the end would make the year's recruiting class one to remember.

"It was going to be hard to replace the players of the caliber we had here from 1984," said Holland. "All three of those had been SLC finalists and knew what it took to win on the college level."

"No matter how good the freshmen you recruit, it is hard for them to adjust to the college game," Holland added. "But Johan Kjellsten had no trouble with the transition. After the fall semester Ulf Persson was ready, and Pontus Lavefalk never missed a beat.

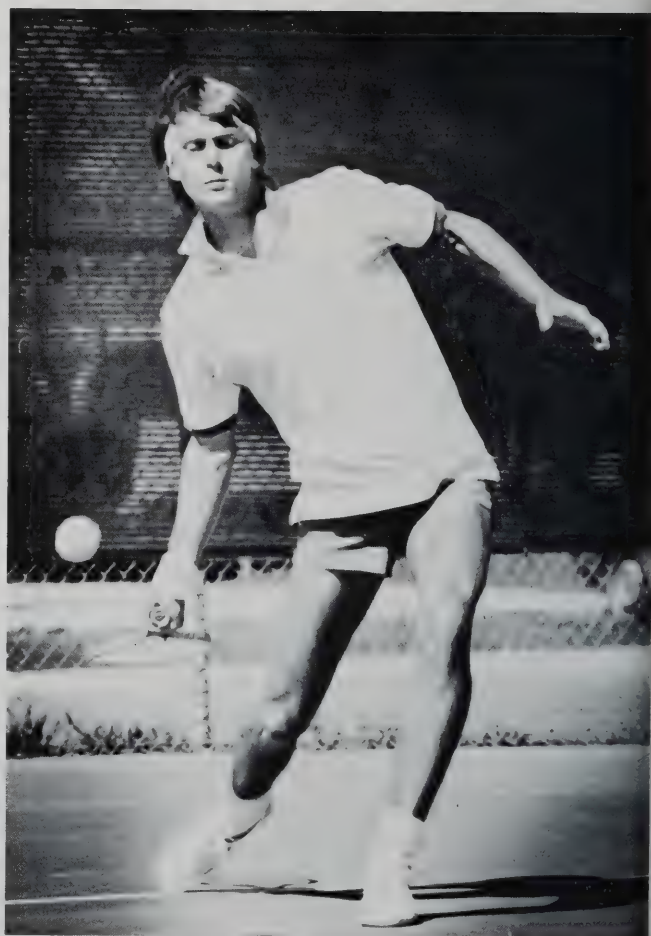

"I had the feeling after the first three weeks of practice that this team had a chance to be very good by the end of the season."

Where the freshmen fit in the lineup was the major surprise. Kjellsten took the No. 1 singles spot from the time he arrived, and Lavefalk took No. 2. Persson took the No. 6 slot.

Seniors filled the other three positions with Ureta stepping in at No. 3, Osberg at No. 4 and Villa at No. 5. All three are All-SLC performers.

"The thing that made this team work was the blend of talent," said Holland. "The freshmen added the youth and excitement while the seniors gave the team the poise and experience it takes to win the tight matches."

The Pokes would start the season with a 9-0 blanking of Centenary in Shreveport before falling to Southwestern Louisiana in their home opener 6-3.

That was followed by a 5-1 victory over Southeastern Louisiana in Hammond setting the stage for the first major accomplishment of the year for the Cowboys.

McNeese went from Hammond on to Hattiesburg, MS, to take part in the 17th annual Big Gold Tournament at Southern Mississippi, a tournament that would feature 31 teams, the largest in the event's history.

The Cowboys also had the distinction of being the defending champion, a role which made the Pokes the major target for the other 30 teams entered.

The Cowboys answered the challenge, leading from start to finish to capture the title for the second straight year, a feat never done before.

The Pokes returned home for their first Southland Conference encounter against defending SLC champion Northeast Louisiana, a team which by midseason would be ranked 13th nationally.

McNeese was no match for the Indians on that day with NLU taking an 8-1 victory, but the loss to NLU seemed to light a fire under the Cowboys, and they put together five straight wins, three of those SLC victories to run their record to 7-2.

The win streak stopped at Baylor, however, as the Pokes dropped a 5-4 decision to the Bears.

"That was a match that we let get away from us," Holland said. "We had the better team, but we didn't win the key points. We did learn from our mistakes, though."

That loss again ignited McNeese. They took off on a six-match winning streak to run their record to 13-3 setting the state for a pivotal match against 20th ranked Florida State in Tallahassee.

McNeese put together one of its best performances of the year that day, but it wasn't enough as the Pokes again fell 5-4.

Despite the loss the Cowboys were playing good tennis, and it was showing in the national rankings with Lavefalk cracking the top 100 at No. 72 and Kjellsten in at No. 99.

"We knew after that Florida State match we could play with anyone," said Holland. "We made up our minds then that we wouldn't lose again."

And the Cowboys didn't, dropping West Florida 9-0 and then picking up SLC victories over Louisiana Tech 7-2 and Lamar 6-3 to enter the SLC tournament behind Northeast with a 5-1 league record and a 17-4 overall mark with two regular season matches remaining.

The singles records of the Cowboys were impressive with Lavefalk leading the way at 23-3 followed by Persson (21-3), Kjellsten (19-5), Ureta (19-6), Villa (19-7) and Osberg (17-6).

The Cowgirls under Robique for the first season returned a good nucleus with SLC finalists Christina Wennberg and Sofi Tegerstrand back in the lineup from their sophomore and junior years. Also back were sophomore Maria Hinojosa, Maria Paradis, Lisa Perez, and freshmen Laura Cadena and Laurie Lewis.

A tough schedule may have been the best thing in the long run for the Cowgirls as they took their lumps, but also learned from their losses.

A 3-6 record halfway through the season was as much as could be expected from this young team, but at that point things seemed to jell for the Cowgirls, and they won five of their next six matches to raise their record to 8-7.

"Playing the good teams early really helped us," said Robique. "We learned how to play against tough competition, and that will help us when the SLC tournament comes around."

Victories over Grambling and Sam Houston coupled with a loss to Houston Baptist put the Cowgirls 9-8 on the year with two matches and SLC tournament remaining.

Wennberg topped the Cowgirls in singles play putting together a 15-6 mark followed by Tegerstrand (13-7), Cadena (12-8), Perez (11-8), Paradis (7-8), Hinojosa (7-8) and Lewis (3-5).

Doubles may have been the biggest surprise of the year. The Cowgirls showed solid performances all season with Cadena and Perez topping the team at No. 2 with a 9-2 mark.

Cadena also teamed with Hinojosa to put together a 6-2 slate followed by Lewis and Perez at 5-3.

A Taste of Success

Athletic competition on the McNeese campus is not limited to organized collegiate sports. Under the direction of Jimmy Pitre, the McNeese Intramural Program is open to all students interested in small-scale athletic confrontations. Coach Pitre, the director of the program since 1980, led his staff in providing service to the McNeese student body. Aided by Assistant Director Coach Keith Zembower, Coach Pitre coordinated the intramural events for both the fall and spring semesters.

Over 6,000 entries were recorded in the 1984-85 academic year, with many of these entries (including individuals and teams) having local businesses sponsor them in the competition. The sponsors helped the team members with the purchasing of uniforms and equipment fees, thus allowing more entries.

Program comes from the recreation complex student assessment. However, this money is returned to the employees of the program, who oversee the running of intramural events. Graduate Assistants Fred Cooke, Jim Hughes, Robert Jeter, Jennifer Meaux, and Carlos Trevino and 80 other students are employed by the program.

Students who compete in events are able to advance to state events, with McNeese sending the first and second place winners in each category to these competitions. In the last year, McNeese representatives have had success on the state level, taking top honors in the softball and men's division tug-of-war. The state champions of the coed flag football were also from McNeese.

One of the major benefits of the Intramurals Program is the new Recreation Complex. This facility provides a central area for students to schedule intramural events as well as providing information for upcoming events.

McNeese Intramural facilities and program, when compared to others in the state, are as good as any that can be found. He feels that others may have more equipment but won't be any better than that of McNeese. Coach Pitre also feels that McNeese constantly improves its program by adding new sports each year and modifying the organizational process.

The McNeese Intramurals Program also provides recreational activities. The intramurals staff, for the third year, co-sponsored with the Rodeo Team the annual Spring Fling. A major change in this year's Spring Fling was moving the festivities off campus to the Burton Coliseum. This move provided more space and, hopefully, set a precedent for years to come.

The final event on the Intramurals agenda is the Awards Day Ceremony at which winners are presented with trophies and certificates recognizing their achievements. On May 2, the 1985 awards program was held in the Parra Ballroom of the Student Union.

The Swing of Things

The story of the McNeese Cowgirls' 1985 softball season could not be measured so much in wins and losses, but in a growing youth movement that holds a bright future.

A total of eight freshmen and six sophomores dotted the lineup in 1985 for coach Cheryl Manuel's squad. The only experienced players on this year's unit were two seniors, second baseman Beth Rist and pitcher Scooter Thibodeaux.

"In the beginning I knew we would be a young team," said

Manuel. "Out of our 18 players 14 of those were freshmen or sophomores.

"The thing I knew we would have to face was inexperience," Manuel added. "That showed up in rushed throws and mental errors in tight situations."

Sophomore Joni Talbot carried the majority of the early-season pitching load for the Cowgirls because freshman pitcher Missy Sepulvado was recovering from an off-season injury.

The Swing of Things

The Cowgirls did get a boost, however, with the return of pitcher Scooter Thibodeaux, who ended the year with a 10-7 record and gave McNeese added pitching depth until Sepulvado was able to return.

Even with the added pitching, the Cowgirls still found the going tough, finishing the year with a 19-27 record and a pair of losses in the Southland Conference Tournament.

"The thing that hurt was lack of leadership," said Manuel. "The team was too young. There was nobody to really take over."

By midseason Manuel found her pitchers burned out from pitching too often, and that hurt the team mentally.

Talbot finished the year with appearances in 26 games and an overall record of 8-18.

In the hitting department junior Lisa Stelly of Shreveport carried the load, batting .270 and cracking three home runs to lead the team in both categories.

The lack of experience obviously hurt the Cowgirls, but with another year's experience under their belts, the team can look for a bright season in 1986.

The Cowboys went for distance hitting in 1985 and turned the season into a home-run-hitting affair.

Not only did the squad set a school record for home runs in a single season but it also set a Southland Conference standard for homers per game.

Probably the keynote of the entire year for the Cowboys was the squad's ability to come through against its toughest competition.

On two separate occasions they battled nationally ranked teams and won.

LSU faced the Cowboy team in early April with a No. 12 ranking nationally, but the Pokes picked off a 3-2 victory. In mid-April Tulane, which had been ranked No. 20, visited for a twinbill.

That turned out to be a sweep for the Pokes as they hammered out 19 hits in winning 11-6 and 9-6, the victory margin in the latter game coming on — what else — a three run homer by Eddie Gueits.

Through 38 games, McNeese had blasted out 42 home runs for a SLC record-setting average of 1.1 per game. Even though the team still had 11 games remaining, there was no chance of collecting the SLC single season record of 71 homers, which had been set by Lamar, but the team did have a chance to snap the home runs per game record.

Home runs weren't just the product of one player during the year as a total of 11 players got into the act. And, in mid-April, the SLC statistical survey had three of the Cowboys ranked one-two-three in the league's home run derby.

Kevin Newkirk was the top producer with eight, while both Dino Pucci and Terry Bond had slapped seven and Eddie Gueits was another step behind with six.

the team were Jimmy Ricklesen with five, David Hartman with four, Mike Abshire and Troy Dodd with two apiece, and Keith Greene and Joe Pantoja with one apiece.

It was quite a year for both Bond and Dodd. Bond played in all of McNeese's tilts, alternating between second base and the outfield, and led the team with a .333 batting average. He was also tops in runs batted in with 31, in base hits with 42 and in runs scored with 26.

Dodd spent some early games on the bench with an injury, but in 20 games posted a healthy .453 average with 12 RBIs.

Nipping at the heels of a .300 batting average were Gueits and Pucci, both with .284 marks.

Ricklefsen and Greene were battling for the team stolen base title, the former with 11 and the latter with 10. Pucci led in doubles with eight and both he and Newkirk were second in runs batted in with 23 apiece. Heading into the stretch run of the SLC round robin, McNeese had a 5-5-1 record and was only three games off the pace of defending champion Lamar.

The Pokes bowed in a three game series with the Cardinals but had a three-game series remaining with Louisiana Tech, which was in second place and only one-half game in back of Lamar.

Over all, the Cowboys record stood at 18-19-1, with 14 of those victories chalked up by the hurling foursome of Jon

Miller, Wayne Bennett, Archie Fields and Scott Richard.

Miller, who was a redshirt freshman, was one of the most consistent hurlers on the team. His record in mid-April was 4-3, and he ranked among the SLC leaders in strikeouts, having 41 in 45 $\frac{2}{3}$ innings.

Bennett was coming on strong at the end of the season and had recorded a 4-6 record, having made his last appearance a complete game win over Tulane.

Richard and Fields were used mainly in relief. Richard posted a 3-0 record, while Fields was 3-1.

Of the 18 victories McNeese compiled during the season, half came on the road and half at home. The Cowboys did have a slightly better record at home where they were 9-4-1.

During the course of the season, head coach Triny Rivera, now in his fifth season, nailed down his 100th coaching victory, that coming on a 4-3 decision over Grambling.

Despite staggering costs of competition, the McNeese Rodeo Team has gained in quality and quantity and is

Back in the Saddle

One of the most successful teams at McNeese is also the one that probably gets the least publicity.

The McNeese Rodeo Team, coached by Rick Kinney, is a nationally-ranked squad with some of the top collegiate talent in the country. As members of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA), both the men's and women's squads have considerable depth. Returning this year for the men's team was Kent Richard, a third-place finisher in the bareback riding event at the 1984 National Competition, and Henry "Bugs" Coe who finished fifth in that same event. David Fournier, the 1981 "Rookie of the Year" also returned for the 1984-85 season.

On the women's side, Layna Miller is a former barrel racing national finalist. Diane Robinson, Mandy Perkins, Kathy Dennison and Raissa Prince are all past Louisiana High School All-Around Cowgirls, and transfer student Lynn McDuffy was named an Alabama High School All-Around Cowgirl in 1982.

In addition to the regular season of competition, the team attends the national finals in Bozeman, Montana. The squad also co-sponsored a "Spring Fling and Rodeo" with the Intramural Department at Burton Coliseum.

Burton Coliseum has become an important part of the team through the efforts of Director Johnny Suydam who has become a co-sponsor of the Cowboys. Renovations to Burton Coliseum will include a covered arena on the east side of the coliseum that will be used for practice.

Coach Kinney credits McNeese President Dr. Jack Doland, Vice President Kenneth Sweeney, Scholarships and Testing Director Ted Breville and Financial Aid Director Desmond Jones for help in establishing the program's large-scale success.

...And It Takes -Knowledge-

Although McNeese's enrollment has increased a great deal in the past few years, the university has not lost sight of its goal to offer high quality education in a relaxing environment. Despite additional students and an increased faculty, McNeese continues to manifest a concern for the individual. The university helps each student strive to reach the fullest level of potential — both spiritually and intellectually.

The rising number of graduates from the university is ample evidence of its success. These graduates take pride in McNeese and they have become its best advertisement. With such outstanding success, it can be seen that McNeese has what it takes to offer the students a strong academic institution in which they will take pride in attending.

Reach for the Stars

The McNeece observatory, a source of interest in the last few years, was transferred to the southeast corner of the Burton Coliseum near J. C. Barman Drive. Before the Spring move, the observatory was located on the McNeece farm. The new location should provide better viewing of astronomical sites since the observatory will be further away from the city's lights.

Dr. David Frantz, professor of physics, is overseer of the observatory. He believes that people of all ages can enjoy astronomy. "All you need," he says, "is a little knowledge and an open mind and then build on that."

The McNeece observatory has access to a 5.5 inch portable telescope and a 12 inch reflecting telescope. Dr. Frantz is in the process of adding a 6-inch refracting telescope currently being built to be mounted on the base of the observatory.

On the second Tuesday of every month, Dr. Frantz hosts a community open house at the observatory. Anyone interested in astronomical concepts is welcome and encouraged to make use of the observatory and to broaden his knowledge of astronomy.

The observatory is open from 7 to 10 p.m., except during summer months, when it is open from sunset until 10 p.m. While appointments are not necessary, clear skies dictate when the observatory is open since viewing is impossible on overcast nights.

In order to further educate the public and publicize the observatory, Dr. Frantz writes a monthly column in the Lake Charles American Press.

Future plans include further expansion of the facilities when a planetarium, which is a domed building with special ceiling effects combined with light, giving an illusion of a night-time sky.

The observatory is a facility that should be looked upon as a special privilege, one not readily available to many universities.

In an effort to increase community interaction, Leisure Learning offers a variety of low-cost courses extending entertainment and education

For the Sheer Pleasure of It

McNeese State University Leisure Learning Office serves the Lake Charles area by furnishing a unique series of non-credit classes to those who want to pursue a new skill or hobby or participate in an educational activity just for fun or personal satisfaction.

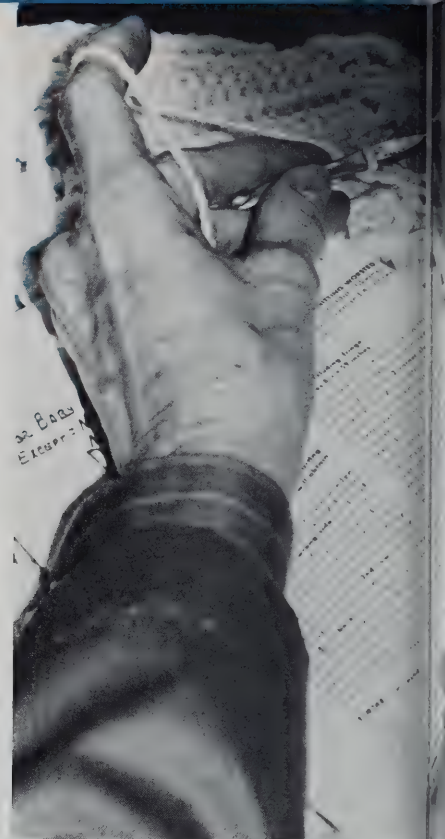

The Leisure Learning courses are offered year round to students and community members for non-credit. The cost for the course is relatively small because the courses are meant to supplement the needs of the participants.

The Leisure Learning Office also incorporates tours to historical sites. A World's Fair weekend in New Orleans was held in October, while a tour of Galveston's old neighborhood was scheduled for April 27. Of special interest to the avid traveler was the tour to England and Scotland, which was planned for August 6-19. Two optional academic courses were scheduled in conjunction with the trip, and could be taken for credit. Dr. Millard T. Jones, associate professor of history, and Ben Harlow, Director of Community Services, escorted the group.

McNeese's Leisure Learning program is the largest of its kind in the state. Most universities offer approximately ten classes, while McNeese offers about 60. Over 2,000 people come to the McNeese Campus to participate in courses each year. Of this number about 200 are McNeese students.

Frances Milburn, Coordinator of Community Services (Leisure Learning) commented on how course topics are selected, "We use several criteria; trends that are national, regional, and local, availability of facilities and equipment, seasonal interests and factors, availability of faculty and personnel, and class evaluations and suggestions."

With state-of-the-art technology and advanced teaching facilities, the new Business Economic Center is

Adding up to Number One

The $5.4 million Business and Economics Center of Southwest Louisiana opened its doors to McNeese students in the Spring of 1985, and according to Wilford Miles, Dean of the College of Business, the BEC opens many other doors towards a better education at McNeese.

"It's a fine academic facility," said Miles, who has been on staff at McNeese since 1981, "it has a number of very special features that make it unusually appropriate to teach business in."

Miles explained that special features such as the new micro-computer lab, a new statistics lab, and the school's first behavioral lab, would enhance all phases of education at McNeese.

"For the first time," said Miles, "real utilization of the school's computer system for larger scale research can be realized by students."

Other special features include a new word processing lab, "tiered" seating in four first-floor classrooms, and, according to Miles, "a very up-to-date office systems lab."

Adjacent to the BEC is the equally new conference center. "The main purpose of the conference center is to bring people from off campus and hold conferences for them," Miles said. He cited management development programs for local industry and small businesses as examples.

"We've been able, with this new building and the equipment in it, to produce a very up-to-date teaching facility," said Miles. "We're going to be able to do things we've never been able to do before."

"It's going to make a major difference in the kind of education we can offer," said Miles.

As one of the most advanced galleries in the state, the Abercrombie Art Gallery is

An Artist's Dream

The Abercrombie Art Gallery, located in the Fine Arts Building, opened its doors in 1984. The gallery honors Mrs. Lillie Frank Abercrombie. Funding was made available by the J. S. Abercrombie Foundation of Houston.

The gallery includes features that set it apart from other galleries in state universities. The walls are covered with approximately 2,000 square feet of neutral-tone museum carpet to insure a distraction-free viewing surface for displays. Fifteen speakers are housed in the ceiling to provide music during receptions. The unique gallery was designed by the architectural firm of Dunn, Quinn, and Gallagher.

"The Abercrombie Gallery is designed to serve the cultural needs of the entire Southwest Louisiana community as well as for meeting the specific academic needs of the university. Citizens can now enjoy viewing original works of art in an aesthetically controlled environment," according to Dr. Jack Doland. The gallery boasts approximately 12 showings a year: a student show, a faculty show, three national shows, and one show from each state university. Photographs, paintings, and artifacts are shown in the gallery. Prose and poetry readings are also held in the gallery.

Under a state Projects Assistance Grant by the Louisiana Division of the Arts, McNeese has scheduled exhibitions by Professor Rudy Pozzati, nationally-known printmaker, and Professor Joe Bova, a leading ceramics artist.

All exhibitions are open to the public from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. The Department of Visual Arts sponsors the exhibitions.

When you're ready to search for that first special job, the McNeese Placement Center can help you in

Starting a New Career

When nearing graduation, students should try to take advantage of the McNeese State University Placement Center. The Placement Center, which is overlooked by many students, sends invitations/letters to corporations across the United States to help in employee recruiting efforts.

The Placement Center offers a free resume service, and can provide students with free valuable career reference materials and job recruiting information.

A part-time job service is also offered through the Placement Office where a card file is kept on available job openings. A student can refer to this file year round for possible job options. Another service is the practice of keeping applications on file. Among these are teacher applications for every parish in the state.

Patricia Cloud, Placement Center secretary, recommends that students start a placement file at least two semesters before their graduation. Included in the file should be a standard college interview form, a student resume, and forms for student evaluations by professors.

"There are so few jobs," Cloud said, "and so many people applying for the same position." A company usually schedules interviews on one day only, and grants about 12 interviews during that day, she pointed out.

A number of McNeese graduates who have located jobs through the Placement Center have returned to McNeese in recent years as interviewers. The companies they represent seem to feel it helps to keep a good rapport with the university. Matching gift funds are popular with individual companies. If an employee of a company makes a sizable donation to the Placement Office of his Alma Mater, the company often matches it. Louisiana school boards, Amoco, Arco Oil & Gas, and McElroy, Quirk & Co., (a local CPA firm) are a few of the companies that actively seek employees from McNeese. Amoco, a major corporate interviewer, has chosen McNeese as one of only a few universities to interview possible employees.

Overall, McNeese students have made a favorable impression on the interviewing companies. Most companies feel that the students are prompt, well-dressed and have good communication skills, a benefit of both the student and McNeese's reputation as a quality university.

The University Computer Center utilizes advanced equipment for the difficult task of

Keeping the Red Tape Organized

The McNeese State University Academic Computer Center boasts state-of-the-art equipment. The Center, located in Kirkman Hall, is responsible for interfacing between the academic users and the central system.

The Academic Center controls an IBM 3776 RJE station for batch work, an IBM System/34 for interactive work in pass-through mode and also for batch work, besides numerous terminals directly attached to the central computer. There are three operating systems for academic use; one for faculty, one for students, and one especially for engineering students.

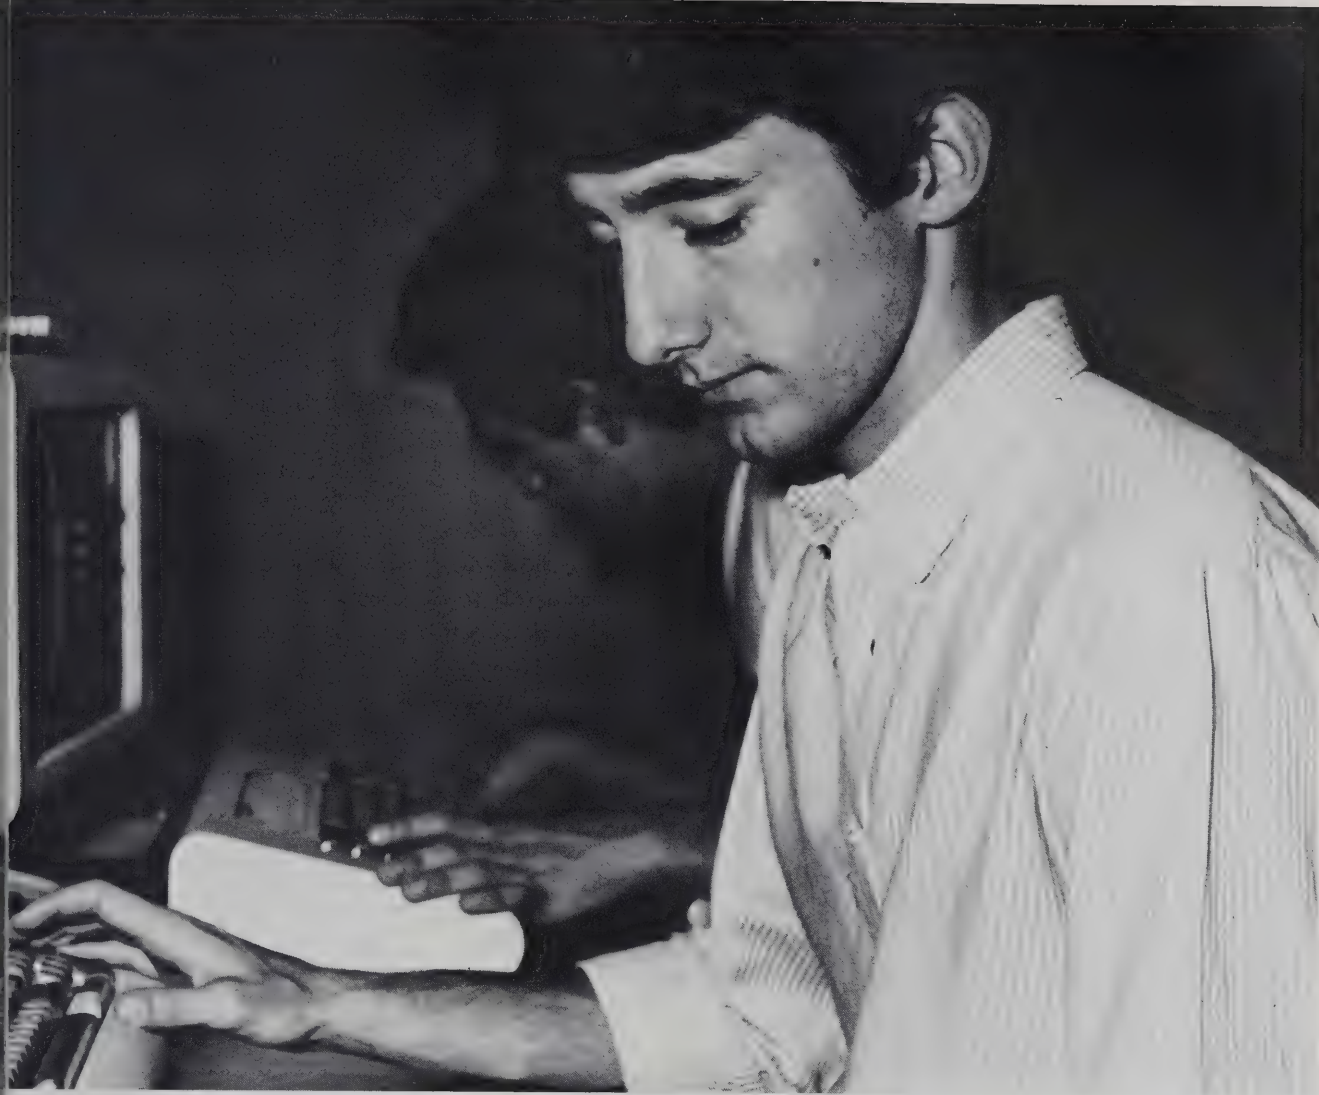

The computer system accepts all programming languages, while offering full screen editing. Other features include built-in statistical processing and built-in text processing, called script. There are about 2,200 users of the computer facilities; consisting of about 1,900 students and about 300 faculty members.

Our computer system is divided into clusters, a group of terminals with a printer. Clusters for student use are located in the Engineering and Technology building, Kirkman Hall, the new Ranch, and the Frazar Library. Additional clusters in Kaufman Hall and in the new Business Economic Center are planned.

A proposal has been made to provide telephone connections from the McNeese Computer Center to users in their own homes or dorm room. However, for now the McNeese Academic Computer System is open for use 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Special arrangements can be made by speaking with the faculty member in charge of the specific clusters.

Turning to Waste

One of the many projects conducted through the McNeese Office of Research and Development during the past year was the Calcasieu Ecosystem Project, better known as the CALECO project. The project was a two-year program funded by a three million dollar grant from the Department of Energy.

The program was designed to detect extensive pollution in the area of the Calcasieu River from the saltwater barrier, north of Lake Charles, to the mouth of the river at the Gulf of Mexico. The team was looking for industrial, municipal, and agricultural pollutants.

The first year of the three-year project was designed to observe the sources of discharge. The second part was to be an analysis of Calcasieu Lake to determine whether or not the pollutants were staying in the lake and affecting life forms in the lake. The project included several substudies: the chemical substudy, the water quality substudy, the primary producer substudy, the zooplankton substudy, the benthos substudy, the nekton substudy, the hydrology substudy and the data management substudy.

Weekly and monthly samples were taken along with more extensive quarterly samples. The project leased a field station at Deatonville and operated from three boats: a twenty-two foot heavy work-boat, a sixteen-foot aluminum boat, and a fourteen-foot aluminum boat. At the conclusion of the project, McNeese will retain one-half to three-fourths of a million dollars worth of equipment.

Dr. Larry DeRouen was in charge of the administrative end of the project while Dr. Harold Stevenson headed the technical side. The project was due for completion in 1986.

Assisted by Margaret Walther and Phillip Rutledge, Dr. Gary Gaston (principal investigator of the CALECO Project) empties samples from the bayou floor, which will be analyzed to determine underwater soil pollution. (Photo by S. Levy)

Having no test or textbooks is a plus for the University Honors program which is taught in

The Spirit of Fun

Everything you ever wanted to know about . . . This is the idea of the university-wide Honors Seminar Program. Students with various interest from several different major fields of study met during the past year through the Honors Seminar to learn about areas of interest to them. Short trips and guest speakers helped to enhance the course. The program is an exciting experience for participating students. The group, led by Dr. Robert Cooper, made excursions to various local points of interest. Once a month the group left campus on a trip. During the year the group visited Cities Services, The Lake Charles American Press, city ports and a Merrill Lynch agency. A highlight of the year was observing a murder trial. Other activities were held on campus, these included visiting with various professors and guest lecturers. The group decided among themselves what they would like to do and whom they would like to hear.

The program is designed to give students the opportunity to learn about many different topics of interest, no matter what their major. Dr. Cooper said of the program: "Students hopefully get a chance to see how various things relate. We try to tie all these things together."

To be eligible for the seminar, a student must have taken at least thirty semester hours and have an overall grade point average of 3.5 or above. The honors course is worth three semester hours and there are no texts or tests.

Boasting academic excellence and outstanding participation and leadership, the students selected for Who's Who are

Who's Who Among American Colleges and Universities is a nation-wide honors publication for outstanding students. Graduating seniors are chosen on the basis of cumulative grade-point average, school service and school participation. The selection is made by a committee of students and faculty members.

Pamela Ann Abate, an English education major at McNeese, has been active at the university over the past four years. Pam pledged Alpha Delta Pi in 1980. She has held membership in the Student Louisiana Association of Educators, student senate, and Pi Kappa Delta, honorary forensics fraternity. Pam also served on the McNeese scholarship committee and the McNeese library committee. During her membership in Pi Kappa Delta, Pam served as secretary-treasurer and vice president.

Karen Sue Batchelor is a music-piano major who holds membership in Sigma Alpha Iota, Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, and Music Educators National Conference. Karen is a member of the A Capella Choir. During her years at McNeese, Karen served as treasurer and president of Sigma Alpha Iota, and accompanist and reporter of A Capella Choir. She received the Board of Trustees and National Merit scholarships.

Bryan Carroll Beam, a general business administration major, was an active McNeese student. He belonged to Kappa Sigma, Blue Key and McNeese Ambassadors. Bryan served as a student member of the McNeese registration committee. While holding membership in various organizations, he served as president of Kappa Sigma, president of the Interfraternity Council, and vice president of Blue Key.

Wilfred Raymond Bourne, Jr. is an accounting major. He is a member of Pi Kappa Phi social fraternity and has served as president. He is also an associate member of the American Accounting Association.

Kevin Reed Broussard is a senior in the Department of Agriculture. He holds membership in the Agriculture Council of Presidents, Block and Bridle, Delta Tau Alpha, the agronomy club and Blue Key honor fraternity. Kevin served as president of Block and Bridle and vice president of the Agriculture Council.

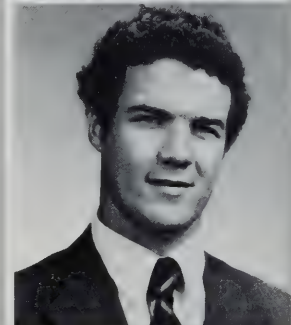

Barry Wayne Bunch is a civil engineering major. He belongs to the American Society of Civil Engineers, the McNeese Engineering Society, and Mu Omega Sigma engineering honor society. He has served as treasurer of ASCE and president of Mu Omega Sigma.

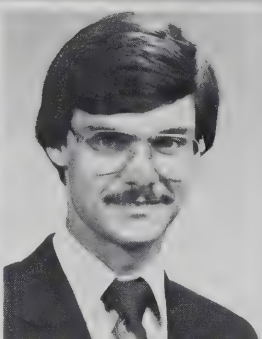

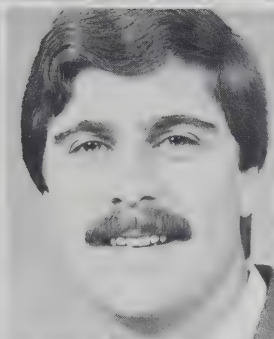

Timothy Mark Conner, a civil engineering major, holds membership in Mu Omega Sigma engineering honor society and the American Society of Civil Engineers. He has served as secretary of ASCE.

Sandra Valentine Corkran, a chemical engineering major, has been active at McNeese. She belongs to the McNeese Engineering Society, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, Mu Omega Sigma honorary engineering society, and Pi Mu Epsilon honorary math fraternity.

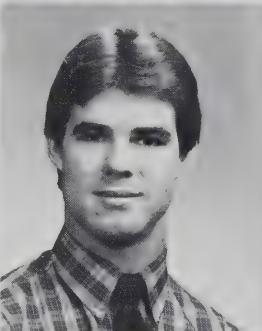

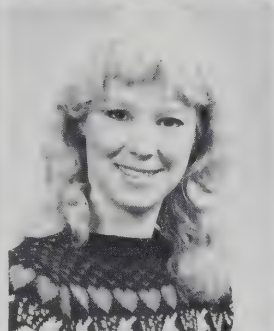

Melissa Ann Cormier is a special education major at McNeese. She holds membership in Alpha Kappa Alpha, Rho Lambda, and the Student Council for Exceptional Children. Melissa served on the student senate and as secretary and president of AKA. She was the recipient of the Faye B. Bryant Undergraduate Excellence Award and attended the Leadership Fellow Seminar in Chicago.

Nicholas Blake Courville is majoring in accounting. He has played football at McNeese for four years. Blake served as secretary-treasurer of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

Timothy Courville, a zoology major, plans to become a physician. He is a member of the Pre-Medical Society, Blue Key, Circle K, and McNeese Ambassadors. Timothy's service includes student director of freshman orientation, president of Blue Key and vice president of the Pre-Medical Society.

Catherine Lynn Denison, an agriculture and business major, has been active at McNeese. She holds membership in the Agriculture Council, McNeese Rodeo Club, Delta Tau Alpha, and Epsilon Alpha Epsilon. As a member of the Rodeo Team, Catherine placed second at regionals and competed in Nationals in Montana. She placed eighth in the nation. Over the past four years she has served as secretary of the Rodeo Club, secretary and president of Delta Tau Alpha, secretary of Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, and secretary-treasurer of the Agriculture Council.

John Fredrick Denison is majoring in agriculture and business. He belongs to Delta Tau Alpha and has served as treasurer. As a member of the Rodeo team, John participated in the 1984 College National Finals Rodeo.

John J. Ecker is a music-theory and composition major. He is a member of the McNeese Band and Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia. John served as secretary of Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia.

Reed Anthony Fontenot, III, a biology major, plans to continue his studies in medical school. He has held membership in the Pre-Medical Society, Pi Kappa Phi, Newman Club, Student Senate, McNeese Ambassadors and Bayou Players. Reed has served on the University Curriculum Committee. Among his areas of service have been corresponding secretary of the Pre-Medical Society, chairman of the Senate and historian of Pi Kappa Phi.

Ginger Ann Foreman, an accounting major, has been active at McNeese. She has held membership in Phi Mu, Rho Lambda, and the Student Government Association. Ginger has served SGA as secretary, executive assistant, and treasurer; Phi Mu as treasurer; and Rho Lambda as treasurer.

Thomas Gerald Gray is an animal science major. He has held membership in Pi Kappa Delta, Delta Tau Alpha, International Club and the debate team. Tom has worked on the Contraband and has been published in the Arena. He has served as senator of various organizations and as treasurer of Pi Kappa Delta.

Johan Anders Hallin is a marketing major. He is a member of the McNeese tennis team and has earned two varsity letters. Johan is a member of the American Marketing Association.

Gloria Hightower, a mechanical engineering major, has held membership in Mu Omega Sigma, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, and McNeese Engineering Society. She has served as treasurer of ASME. Gloria was the recipient of the Marion Garrison Award.

Carol L. Knight, an accounting major, has been active while at McNeese. She has held membership in Chi Omega, Phi Chi Theta, Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, Rho Lambda, McNeese Ambassadors, SGA senate, Cowgirl Kickers, and Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program. Among Carol's areas of service are treasurer and assistant secretary of Chi Omega, president of Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, secretary of Rho Lambda, site coordinator of VITA, University Scholarship Committee, and University Commencement Committee.

Darrel Paul LeJeune is an accounting major. He has held membership in Blue Key, McNeese Accounting Society, Pre-Legal Society, and Student Senate. Darrel participated in the Accounting Internship program and was associate editor of the Contraband for three years.

Beverly Kay Macri, an engineering major, has held membership in Mu Omega Sigma, and ROTC. She has served as personnel officer of ROTC and has been named Distinguished Military Student.

Bridget Lynn Marcantel is a mechanical engineering major. She has belonged to several organizations including Pi Mu Epsilon, Mu Omega Sigma, McNeese Engineering Society and American Society of Mechanical Engineers. Bridget has served as treasurer and vice president of ASME, student representative of Region X to the National Student Section Committee of ASME, and vice president and president of MES. She has been the recipient of the Marion Garrison Award and the Outstanding Junior Engineering Award.

Guy Steven McInnis is an accounting major. He is a member of the McNeese varsity basketball team and has earned four letters. Guy is also a member of the American Accounting Society.

Katherine Joyce Meadows, a chemical engineering major, has been an active McNeese student. She has held membership in Pi Mu Epsilon, McNeese Engineering Society, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, Society of Petroleum Engineers and varsity rodeo team. Katherine has served as president of AIChE.

Charles E. Nourcier, Jr. is an electrical engineering major. He has held membership in Pi Kappa Phi, McNeese Engineering Society, Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineering, Mu Omega Sigma, Pi Mu Epsilon, and Blue Key. Charles has held the positions of president, warden and Interfraternity Council representative of Pi Kappa Phi; council member of MES; and project chairman, senator, vice president and president of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineering.

Melton Dwayne O'Brien is majoring in government and plans to become a lawyer. He is a member of Pi Kappa Phi, Blue Key, ROTC, Pre-Legal Society, SGA, French Club, and Interfraternity Council. Among his areas of service are Pi Kappa Phi vice president, Blue Key vice president, ROTC cadet lieutenant colonel and battalion commander. He is on the ROTC rifle team and has received flight training. The Gulf National Bank Award and the Distinguished Military Student Award are among his accomplishments.

Lucinda Ogea, a business management major, has been an active student. She has held membership in Chi Omega, Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, Phi Chi Theta, Rho Lambda, American Marketing Association and McNeese Ambassadors. Lucinda has served as social chairperson of AMA, assistant treasurer of Chi Omega, vice president of Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, and president of Phi Chi Theta.

Suzanne Parker is a finance major. She has belonged to several organizations including Chi Omega, Rho Lambda, Epsilon Alpha Epsilon and Resident Student Association. Suzanne has served on the SGA homecoming committee, as personnel chairman and treasurer of Chi Omega, and as freshman senator.

Don Paul Richards, a health and physical education major, has played quarterback for the Cowboy football team and has lettered four years.

Sylvia Beth Tanner, an accounting major, has held membership in Delta Sigma Pi, Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, Bayou Players, Student Union Board and Accounting Society. She has served as Accounting Society vice president and BSU freshman council secretary. Sylvia received the Best Acting Award in the 1982-83 season.

Donna Kay Theriot is an agribusiness major. She has been a member of Alpha Delta Pi, Delta Tau Alpha, and Epsilon Alpha Epsilon. As a member of Alpha Delta Pi she has served as pledge class president, guard and pledge trainer.

Charlie Nelson Thomas, Jr., a nursing major, has held membership in McNeese Student Nurses Association, Louisiana Student Nurses Association, National Student Nurses Association, and McNeese Student Government Association. Charlie has served on the Nursing Department Curriculum Committee, and as parliamentarian and secretary of MSNA.

Gary Scott Troutman is an accounting major. He belongs to the Accounting Society and has served as president and vice president. Gary has worked on the Contraband and participated in the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance program.

Alvaro Trullenque, a business administration major, holds membership in the American Marketing Association. He has played tennis for four years and has won cup honors in singles and doubles in the Southland Conference.

Glen L. Vandermolen is majoring in mass communication. He has held membership in Lambda Chi Alpha, Bayou Players and Latin Club. Glenn has also worked on the Contraband.

C.M. Shelly Van Hook, a education major, is a member of Chi Omega, RSA, AESP, and LAHPERD. Shelly has served as a student athletic trainer for two years and has been rush counselor and activity chairman for Chi Omega.

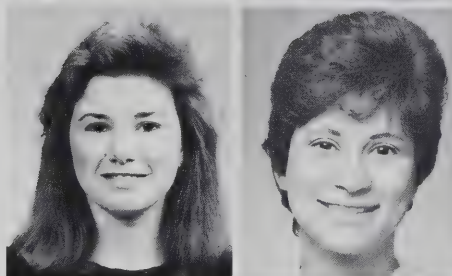

Dorothy Anne Walther, a chemistry major, has been an active McNeese student holding membership in the American Chemical Society, Epsilon Alpha Epsilon, Newman Club, German Club, Band, and Louisiana Catholic College Students. Among her areas of service are president and newsletter editor of LCCS, vice president of Newman Club, treasurer and vice president of German Club, secretary of American Chemical Society and chaplain of Epsilon Alpha Epsilon.

...And It Takes -People-

McNeese State University has more than 8,000 priceless assets.

These are its students and faculty who come from nearly every corner of the globe to share and enrich the life of the community and themselves.

Though the worth of the individual is foremost, a sense of community leads to the formation of many special and life-long friendships.

Both the students and the faculty and administration at McNeese help make the university a special place to grow and learn.

For warmth, friendliness, and a caring atmosphere, McNeese has what it takes to be a "gold-mine" of personal opportunities.

The differing faces of McNeese can be seen in the members of the Student Art Association, who "dressed up" as famous faces for their annual Halloween party. (Photo by S. Levy)

Dr. Jack Doland's accessibility to students and faculty, as well as his open-door policy, proved to be

McNeese has a winning combination — policy, students, faculty and facility. This idea is supported by President Jack V. Doland. Taking pride in the accomplishments of McNeese students and graduates is a rewarding part of the president's job.

McNeese's image is a large part of our success. Dr. Doland's "open door" policy has added to the image. Students are able, after going through proper channels, to see the president when a problem arises. Dr. Doland acknowledged that there have been problems; but with the cooperation of the deans, department heads, faculty members, and students, the situations have been resolved.

"If the students are satisfied with their education and the faculty are satisfied with their jobs; they're worth more than all the advertising you can do," Dr. Doland said. Enrollment has risen more than 40 percent and several new programs have received national accreditation, including education, nursing and engineering. According to Dr. Doland, McNeese attracts its share of students from Southwest Louisiana and from other areas as well.

The faculty has played its role in creating a good image for McNeese. "We do have top-quality education and a high-caliber faculty. We've improved it tremendously in four years, with only top-flight professors being hired."

The image is enhanced, too, by the campus setting. "We've improved the surroundings." Four new buildings have been erected and now serve the university, including one of the finest recreational facilities in the state. Dr. Doland said McNeese needs another science building, in addition to Frasch Hall. If funding is available, the new building could be the priority project this fall.

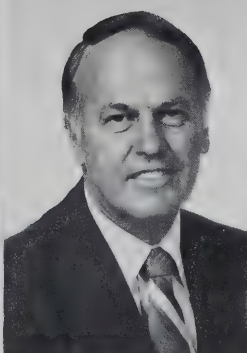

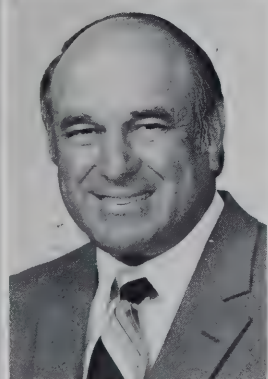

McNeese's most improved achievement is its growth — becoming the fastest growing university in the state. "I attribute the growth in enrollment to the good image of the university created by the faculty and students."

News conferences are one of the president's many duties. During a fall semester news conference, Dr. Doland addresses the press and discusses plans for future developments. (Photo by T. Maricle)

Offering such curricula as the radiologic technology program trains students to offer

Better Quality Medicine

McNeese State University has one of the top radiologic technology programs in the nation, according to an American Medical Association (AMA) reaccreditation team here for a five-year assessment.

The McNeese program, which was instituted in 1978, is one of only 17 of the total 763 in the nation which offer a Bachelor of Science degree.

The McNeese program includes two years of pre-professional study in clinical radiology at one of three area affiliates, St. Patrick, Memorial, and West Calcasieu-Cameron Hospitals.

"Since the program began, the success rate on the American Registry of Radiologic Technology exams has been phenomenal," says Greg Bradley, program director, who came to McNeese in 1981 from Morehead State University in Kentucky.

For example, Bradley points out, "three of 101 McNeese graduates scored 93 percent or better on this year's national certification exam. For the second consecutive year, there was a 100 percent passing rate."

"Our average score on the exam has been 88 percent out of 100. On the national average that's usually in the upper 20 percent."

The success rate for students who apply for advanced study and enter areas of specialization — radiation therapy, nuclear medicine, ultrasonography, and special procedures such as angiograms, and computer enhancement of arterial images — is also a source of pride to Bradley, he says.

"We've been extremely successful in having our students accepted to these specialization programs," he says. Of 30 McNeese graduates, he says, 10 have either entered speciality fields or have risen to a supervisory level. Three are now Radiation Therapists; two are Computerized Tomography (Cat Scanning) Technologists; one is currently in Nuclear Medicine School at the University of Oklahoma.

Bradly attributes McNeese's accomplishments to the "very high quality" of the program, and to the fact that entry into the professional program is governed by strict admission.

Approximately 75 are currently enrolled in various levels of the curriculum, but only 10 were accepted into the professional phase last semester. Accreditation standards set the maximum number for this phase at 13.

Although the current faculty to student ratio is 2:1 with two full-time and three adjunct clinical instructors and a medical advisor (Dr. J. R. Romero of Lake Charles), Bradley says the university is anticipating an increase to maximum capacity (a ratio of 10:1) because of the recent enactment of a Louisiana law which will require all radiographers employed by hospitals to be licensed. In order to be licensed, a technologist must graduate from an AMA-accredited program, such as McNeese's.

Living his life under Communist rule allows Chris Janowski to offer

A View from the Other Side

Poland has a history of foreign domination, according to McNeese Student Krzysztof (Chris) Janowski, but "although under Russian domination, Poland is not Communistic in theory," he adds. And despite the fact that Poland hasn't been independent, in the American sense of the word, the Polish people have steadily progressed through the years.

During World II, approximately 90 percent of Poland was destroyed. The country was rebuilt very quickly and soon became an important European center for industry. As a result, many Poles moved to cities to make a living.

Although the Polish do live a western lifestyle, they do not enjoy the luxuries many Americans take for granted. Although in most families both husband and wife work, "not many people own homes," and "for every ten families," said Janowski, "only one has a car."

"In Poland, food prices are the same all over," according to Janowski. Prices are controlled by the government. In essence, anywhere one shops in Poland, he will find the prices are always identical.

Education in Poland is different than the educational system in the United States. They have an 11-year school system. The seven lower grades are primary school. The four upper grades are secondary school.

In secondary school, which is equivalent to American high schools, the educational process is specialized. There is general education, and there are technical schools. Basically, a student prepares for a career in a specific area before leaving high school. These schools are prerequisites for any university work. Polish schools also have exchange programs. "There are foreign students in Poland just like there are foreign students in America here at McNeese," Janowski said.

Even though there are 21 similar programs across the U.S., the program at McNeese is

Exclusive in Louisiana

The only reason McNeese has a Creative Writing Program, according to Dr. John Wood, director of the program, is "because we have a (university) president and vice-president who had enough foresight to push it through."

The Master of Fine Arts degree in Creative Writing was first instituted 30 years ago in Iowa. Today, there are approximately twenty-one MFA programs in the country, and McNeese is the only school in Louisiana to have acquired one.

When Wood, who holds an MFA in creative writing, came to McNeese, he started the first creative writing course. Eventually, many of the students who enrolled in it were published and won state and national contests. When Dr. Jack Doland became president of the university, he immediately approved and set up the funds for a graduate degree in creative writing.

This type of program is always hard to start. One of the major difficulties in beginning an MFA program in creative writing is usually financial. The program is expensive, mainly because the school must be able to bring in famous writers for workshops, have a faculty with specialized degrees in creative writing, and have a program that allows for graduate assistantships.

"We have had incredible support from the administration," commented Wood. Usually, in other schools, most programs complain about limited support from their administrators; this is probably due to the amount of money they must invest in such a program. Wood also stated that, "Every single thing they complain about is not a problem here."

Although there are about one-hundred programs in the country which have an emphasis in creative writing, only twenty-one offer a pure creative writing degree. The MFA is equivalent to a Ph.D. and requires sixty semester hours. Based on the quality of the applicant's work, acceptance into the program is very competitive.

Classes in the program are kept small so that the instructors, Dr. Wood, and Dr. Leo Marcello, can have individual conferences and work closely with students.

"There is a lot of very good writing happening in the United States right now," said Wood. Each year an anthology is published by the Associated Writing Program (AWP). The very best student work is selected from the one-hundred member schools of the AWP. In the most recent edition, twenty-one schools had their student work in this national publication, and McNeese was one of them.

During the last three years, McNeese has had many distinguished poets and prose writers on campus. "We probably have as many guests, and maybe even more than the other programs," according to Wood. McNeese guests have included Larry McMurtry, author of Terms of Endearment, and W. D. Snodgrass, Pulitzer Prize winning poet.

The home to a wide range of teaching aids for student teachers and classes, the Curriculum Materials Center concentrates on

Helping Teachers Teach

The Curriculum Materials Center acquires, organizes and circulates the best materials available for student teachers, method classes, library science students, and faculty of the College of Education.

The center, located on the second floor of Farrar Hall, seats 68, and consists of a large room, one office, and a partitioned work area. The materials center director selects the materials housed by the center.

"Much emphasis is placed on the selection of appropriate teaching aids for the use of the student teachers, as well as curriculum guides and other materials useful to the student," says Margaret Baker, director of the center.

Much thought and careful consideration also goes into the selection of books for the juvenile collection, which is used by the children's and adolescent literature classes.

Faculty are also encouraged to make requests for materials that are suitable for this particular collection. Selection is an on-going task leading to a well-balanced collection.

Textbook companies and publishers send gifts of demonstration materials. A large supply of floppy disks for computer classes has also been added.

"A video-cassette module collection has been placed in the center through the auspices of the State Department of Education," Baker said.

A program sponsored by Polaroid Corporation and the American Library Association now permits the free use of a Polaroid Instamatic camera.

Until September 1969, the Curriculum Materials Center was recognized as part of Frazar Memorial Library. Then the center was moved to Farrar Hall, the new education building, where a special area has been designed for it.

The center continued under the administration of Frazar Memorial Library until June 1972, when it became part of the College of Education.

The Curriculum Materials Center is open four days a week, Monday through Thursday, from 7:45 a.m. until 7 p.m. and on Friday from 7:45 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

The money available through scholarships, grants and work study helps most students with the problem of

Financing an Education

Need assistance in financing your college education? The McNeese Financial Aid Office can help you solve the problem. This year, 48 percent of the McNeese student body have received financial assistance.

According to Desmond Jones, Director of Financial Aid, the important things are "... to apply early and every year." The reasons, he adds are that the aid is distributed on a first-come first-served basis, and it takes approximately six to eight weeks to complete an application.

Applications must be filed before May 1 for the fall and spring semesters, and The Financial Aid Office, located in Smith Hall, extends assistance to students seeking help to continue their education. (Photo by Mericle)

April 1 for the summer semester. However, after the May 1 deadline, students can still apply for the Pell Grant and the Guaranteed Loan.

The money available depends on the amount allotted by the state and federal government. The amount this year is less than last year.

"Once the money is given to the university, it (the school) must have a system of determining how to distribute the aid," Jones said.

This is the time when applications come into play. They give a good picture as to what the needs of the students are, whether they have the grades, and whether they are full-time students.

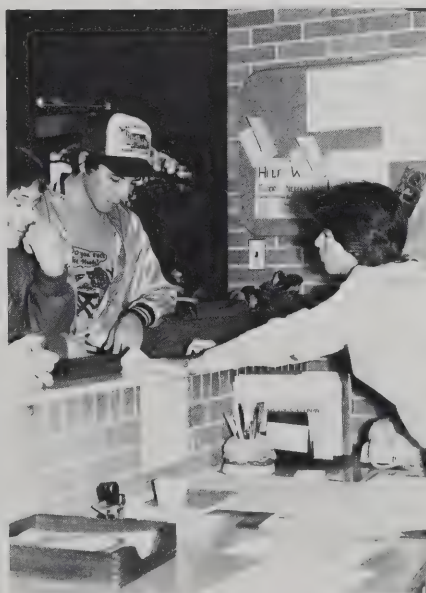

The programs available at McNeese include the Pell Grant (BEOG), the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (SEOG), the State Student Incentive Grant (SSIG), and the work study program. These do not have to be paid back.

Other programs which are offered but must be repaid are the National Direct Student Loan (NDSL), and the State Guaranteed Loan (SGL).

However, "... the amount of aid given depends on the needs of the student. A system called 'packaging' is handled by Mary Kaye Bishop (assistant to Desmond Jones)," Jones said.

Packaging enables students with high need factors to receive enough funding to cover most of their college expenses.

"The Financial Aid Office tries to solve the students' needs with a well qualified staff who are dedicated to helping the students," Jones said.

To become a serious writer, it not only takes practice, but according to Sydney Lea, it also takes

A Natural Talent

"Talent is very hard to diagnose," said poet Sydney Lea, "and you really can't tell if you're good until you've written a lot for a long time."

Lea, who also edits The New England Review, was at McNeese last fall to give a public reading of his poetry.

Lea has taught literature and instructed creative writing workshops at Dartmouth, Yale, and Middlebury. He is the author of The Floating Candles, Searching for the Drowned Man, and a critical volume entitled Gothic to Fantastic: Readings in Supernatural Fiction.

"You can't write very well," according to Lea, "unless you've got a lot of talent. That is important." But anything you do for a long time, you'll get better at, whatever your talent may be. I always felt that persistence is as important as talent.

"The way to teach yourself to write, in addition to reading," Lea said, "is by writing."

Lea used Wallace Stevens and John Keats to exemplify his point. "Wallace Stevens will make you weep with laughter at his early poems; they are just simply embarrassing. Looking at the early writings of Keats is a joke."

Lea feels writing bad poems is a necessary experience. "Writing bad poems is not a sin. You'll write bad poems; you have to learn to accept them. They're the dogs that you raise in order to have an occasional Burmese cat that comes out."

"In the process of writing, however wretched it turns out to be, you're learning something."

"But any teacher or critic who has the arrogance to say 'stop' to a writer would have stopped both Stevens and Keats."

After completing graduate school, Lea began to write seriously. "I began to write quite furiously; I made time to write every day."

Visiting poet Sydney Lea offered advice on ways to improve writing, but he stressed the point that writing was an inborn talent. (Photo by Smith)

"Having been brought up without television and much in the way of movie houses, we tended to amuse one another by telling stories."

Lea was originally attracted to fiction, but now, spends most of his time writing poetry.

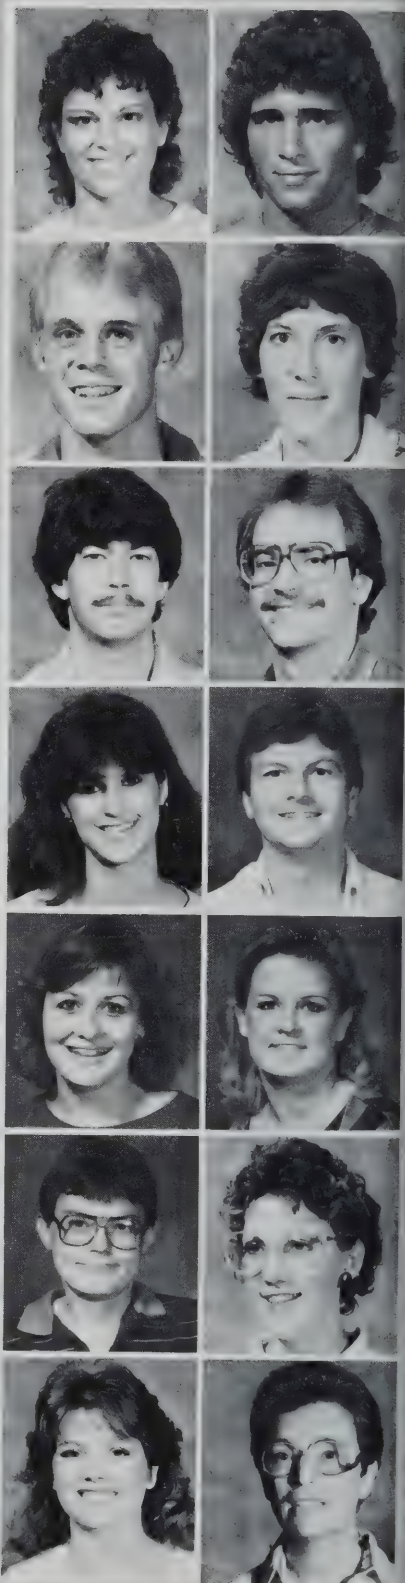

"In order to get the quality of actual speech in prose, I'd have had to imitate it, and that's a hard thing to do. It takes a Mark Twain to do something like that successfully."

"In poetry, however," he added, "I might be able to capture the quality of speech without having to imitate it."

Lea began to write serious poetry at 33, and his first poem was published when he was 34.

Lea was on leave from teaching at Middlebury. "I have a couple of very pleasant residencies to look forward to." These include a trip to Italy to complete his third book of poetry and a trip to Ireland for revision of the work.

Lea was at McNeese as a guest of the Master of Fine Arts Program in Creative Writing. His poetry reading marked the conclusion of the semester's offerings.

If the books contain any risque subject matter which might be offensive, someone will always be trying to

Keep them off the Shelves

The Crucible contains "sick words from the mouths of demon-possessed people." This was the general attitude of a group of people who challenged the right of a Pennsylvania high school library to allow the Arthur Miller play to be accessible to the students.

In their opinion, "It should be wiped out of the schools, or the school board should use it to fuel the fire of hell."

September 8-15, 1984 was named Banned Book Week by the American Library Association. The Lether E. Frazar Memorial Library at McNeese participated in Banned Book Week with a display of books thought to be "immoral and dangerous." A video conference on intellectual freedom and the consequences of banning books was also available for viewing at the reference desk.

Various groups of people concerned about the "moral decay of America's youth" have attempted to have books removed from circulation.

In 1982, J. D. Salinger's Catcher in the Rye was removed from school libraries in Morris, Manitoba (Canada) because it violated the committee's guidelines concerning "excess vulgar language, sexual scenes, things concerning moral issues, excessive violence, and anything dealing with the occult."

On the other hand, however, there are many individuals and groups who oppose this kind of censorship. They point out that the U. S. Constitution grants "freedom of speech and the press," and that this freedom of expression is the backbone of the American political system.

Some of the books challenged at various libraries, ironically, are also considered literary masterpieces by scholars. After all, when the average person hears about Shakespeare, Homer, William Faulkner, or Elizabeth Barrett Browning, the idea of censorship doesn't seem logical.

There are other challenged books in which the question of literary merit is not necessarily relevant. An example of this is Jim Miller's The Rolling Stone Illustrated History of Rock and Roll. This work was challenged in Jefferson County, Kentucky (1982) because, according to some, it "will cause our children to become immoral and indecent."

Although some special interest groups actually pinpoint particular books they consider dangerous, there are also groups who don't go that far.

The Catholic Church, for example, suggests that any affiliation (reading, buying, selling) with books which can be morally dangerous is against what is considered to be "natural law," and "the Christian faithful have the duty and right to denounce writings which harm correct faith or good morals."

The book banning issue has been a problem in many parts of the world for a long time. It has become a moral issue, and like most moral issues, no one answer seems to satisfy everyone.

On one side of the fence, there are those who wish to "protect our children from immorality and indecency." On the other side are those who, like Oscar Wilde, think "There is no such thing as a moral or an immoral book."

In his seminars on poetry taught across the nation, David Bottoms instructs would-be poets in

The Art of Expression

"If I were to give advice to inexperienced and younger writers," said poet David Bottoms, "I'd tell them to have some patience and determination because so many people become discouraged when those first few rejection slips come in."

Bottoms, winner of the 1979 Walt Whitman Award of the Academy of American Poets, was a guest of the McNeese Master of Fine Arts Program in Creative Writing. While on campus he held individual conferences with poets in the program. He also presented a public reading of his poems at the Lether E. Frazar Memorial Library.

Bottoms is the author of three books of poems; he has published Jamming With the Band at the VFW, Shooting Rats at the Bibb County, and In a U-Haul North of Damascus. Shooting Rats at the Bibb County was chosen by Robert Penn Warren as winner of the Walt Whitman Award.

"I have memories of writing during high school," Bottoms said, "but I didn't start publishing until I was in graduate school." His first book, Jamming With the Band at the VFW, was released in 1973.

"When I was in school, there weren't any poetry workshops. In fact, I didn't attend workshops until I went away to work on my doctorate, and I had already published a book by that time."

Presently, Bottoms teaches creative writing at Georgia State University in Atlanta; he instructs poetry and fiction workshops. "In my poetry workshops," Bottoms commented, "I usually try to blend writing and (the study of) literature so that we always focus on something." Bottoms admires such writers as James Dickey, Robert Penn Warren, James Wright and Theodore Roethke.

Bottoms is currently editing an anthology with Dave Smith, a Virginian poet. The Morrow Anthology of Younger American Poets, of which Bottoms is also a contributor, was released in February. It features 105 American poets born in 1940 and after.

Bottoms has served on the Literary Advisory Panel to the Georgia Council for the Arts and is currently serving on the Callanwolde Poetry Committee of the Callanwolde Fine Arts Center in Atlanta. He was a featured reader at the 1983 South Atlantic Modern Language Association convention and in "Ten Poetry Readings in 1980," sponsored by the Academy of American Poets.

Being involved in the tutoring program serves as a source of income for some students, and it also provides the needed support for

Helping the Disadvantaged Succeed

McNeese State University began providing individual tutoring and special assistance services to disadvantaged and physically handicapped students who have a need for academic support.

The project is intended to address the special needs of "at risk" students, those identified as being in danger of dropping out before graduation because they are disadvantaged either through learning or physical disabilities or because they are first-generation college students and/or from low income families. Some 200 McNeese students received assistance during the 1984-85 school year.

The objectives of this project are to increase the proportion of students who elect or are entitled to stay in school; to increase the grade-point average of participating students; to reduce the number of curriculum changes made within an academic year; and to increase the proportion of graduating project-assisted students pursuing graduate or professional study.

Qualifications for tutors include a grade-point average of 2.7 - 4.0, as well as the meeting of set financial guidelines. Tutoring sessions will be held during normal business hours, and students can work up to ten hours per week, depending on their class schedules.

The project is under the direction of Brenda M. Ball, who also serves as an advocate for McNeese's physically handicapped. Sena C. Theall serves as Learning Disabilities Specialist.

Student internships offered through various departments not only give the participants experience but they also allow them to

Work for Class Credit

Hands-on experience through internships may be just what a student needs to successfully compete for a job after graduation.

Students can get this valuable experience while attending McNeese by seeking employment in their fields of study. Many departments offer internships that will give a student hands-on experience, and class credit as well.

Mandy Roberts and Mark Guzman are both Mass Communications majors, and they have interned at the news department at KPLC-TV. Guzman interned during the summer, while Roberts was employed in the fall.

"Not only was it a teaching tool in the sense that it gave me hands-on experience," Guzman said, "but it also gave me insight into the workings of a TV studio."

"I answer opinion polls, file scripts, and sometimes I go out with reporters," Roberts said, describing her duties at KPLC. "Other times I go out with a cameraman and cover a story myself."

"Hopefully, I plan to use this experience in future employment," Roberts said. Guzman, however, has other ideas.

"I don't plan to go into broadcasting," he said, "but I'm glad I have experience that I can use in other television fields."

Ron Davis, a junior advertising major, interns at Collingwood and Co., a local advertising firm.

"I do graphic design and production of advertising material," Davis said, "It's experience on the real thing, from ideas and concepts to applying your skills and producing the actual art."

"For being an inexperienced designer, the best thing I've done so far is a presentation piece for a computer company," Davis said. "It involved all the skills that you would need to be a graphic designer. Basically what they said was 'Here's the project—do it!' It was a big step."

"The best thing that I'm getting from the job is the experience of working under pressure and the application of skills," Davis adds.

"Everything that I'm doing now applies directly to my future employment," Davis claims.

Nita Dean is a senior majoring in chemistry. She interned at Olin Chemical Co. from January 1982 to May 1984. In her intern program Dean worked for one semester then went to school full-time the next.

"I worked with chemists in the lab," Dean says of her duties. "I had opportunities to use instrumentation in chemical analysis, like gas chromatographs, and other instruments commonly used in chemical laboratories."

Dean says of her experience at Olin, "It was a great opportunity for the practical application of what I learned at school."

Tim Perry works at the National Weather Service. He is in a co-op program with the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration. The co-op program is not a true intern program, since the students employed in the program do not receive any class credit and the program is not associated with McNeese.

Perry follows a schedule similar to Dean's—he works full-time for a semester, then attends McNeese full time the next.

"I monitor, calibrate and modify the equipment at the Weather Service," Perry says.

"One benefit was that it gave me practical job experience in my field, which is electronics. There is a difference between textbook examples and real-world problems," he notes.

Many students view internships as a key to future employment, since the valuable experience and training gained from the hands-on program give students an edge in the highly competitive job market.

Since the addition of the EASE program and Leisure Learning, McNeese has made great advances in accomodating everyone who is

Wanting to Learn

"I was amazed the students accepted me into McNeese without any questions," says Jessie Chastain, "and I was impressed with the quality of the students and professors on campus."

Chastain is one of an ever-growing number of adult students between the ages of 20 and 80, who have decided to fit academics into their busy schedules.

Chastain, along with Anita Henderson and Evelyn Shaddock represent a population group McNeese has endeavored to accommodate.

Mindful of the courage it takes to return after being away from high school or college for a period of time, the university has developed two special programs for older students: EASE (Emphasis on Adult Special Entry) and Leisure Learning.

"It was an experience to return to college because I hadn't been back in 45 years," says Chastain, "I went back through the EASE program."

EASE offers simplified admission and registration procedures for non-degree seeking adults who have not attended high school or college during the previous year, and who desire to take undergraduate courses.

"I would recommend this program to any older student thinking about returning to McNeese," Henderson adds.

Students enrolled through EASE may take any undergraduate courses providing they meet prerequisites. Students may take an indefinite number of undergraduate hours.

"I graduated from the University of Georgia with a degree in journalism. The types of undergraduate courses available at McNeese impressed me," says Chastain.

Leisure Learning, another popular program for students, accounts for some 15 percent of the McNeese student body.

However, all other students do not elect to go through EASE and Leisure Learning programs. Evelyn Shaddock, for example, decided to attend McNeese as a regular college student. She graduated in 1983 with a degree in liberal studies.

"This gave me a great sense of accomplishment, and if I decide to return, the courses I take will be for credit," says Shaddock.

"Education for adults is a challenge — both for the student and for the University," says George Kuffel, coordinator. "The adult program is a special part of McNeese's total educational effort to serve the community. It is conducted in an atmosphere of care and concern."

Voncille Zama, a Lake Charles freshman who got her start in college through the EASE program, puts the finishing touches on her charcoal drawing in a fall art class.

Spending over $1 million dollars on a heating and cooling system will lower costs, but it will also help in

Keeping Education Comfortable

Work began during the fall semester on a new, centralized heating and cooling system for the McNeese campus. The $5.4 million, state-of-the-art system took 18 months to complete.

McNeese had a $1.1 million electric bill the year before construction began. According to Paul Ritter, director of facilities and Planning, "somewhere around 70 percent of that was for cooling."

In meetings with Gulf States Utilities, it was revealed that rates would increase four times by 1992, Ritter explained. "Nobody can afford a $4.4 million electric bill," Ritter said. This fact was the justification for the new system.

The new system will eliminate the old, expensive, unreliable heating/cooling systems around campus. There are at least 39 separate systems. Maintenance on them is approximately $100,000.

Ritter compared the old systems to a car. He said that the compressors are regular V-6 and V-8 engines, the same as in any automobile.

"If you drove your car at 50 m.p.h. for the number of hours they (the air conditioners) run, it would average close to 250,000 miles-per-year," he said.

Ritter says the new system will be much more dependable. In 1982, McNeese lost nearly $100,000 due to compressor failures.

Bel Hall was without air for two months, and the repair was $12,000. The system in Bel is over 23 years old. The dependability of a compressor and a turbine is like a jet engine, Ritter said.

The project will construct a central air and heating plant with computer-managed control for the main campus. An underground, four-pipe chilled/hot water system will serve all the buildings on campus.

By 1986 the system will have completely paid for itself, he expects.

The system has a 1,000-ton backup, and all the pipe is pre-insulated, reinforced, non-corrosive fiberglass, which should last indefinitely.

The new system is run by computers.

"We'll pay so much a month for approximately 60 months, then own it," Ritter said. "We're not paying much more on the lease-purchase agreement than on the rest."

With 24 hour a day service to the university, the Campus Police offer McNeese

Continuous Dedication

"There they go again with the parking tickets!"

This phrase seems to cross the minds of students who return to their cars from class to find a parking ticket on their windshields.

However, the McNeese campus police not only enforce traffic regulations, but they also escort students, assist in trouble situations, and maintain safety on the campus.

"We want to convey to the students that we are here to help them get through school without harm," says David Tate, assistant director of the McNeese University Police.

As the number of students has increased, the number and types of crimes also has increased.

"The duties are diverse," said Tate. But the McNeese police staff is qualified to handle different situations, since each staff member has attended the Police Academy, and all are state and deputy sheriff-commissioned.

The McNeese campus security is an independent state university police department. However, they are also affiliated with the Louisiana University Police Association. This means the campus police are in total control of everything that happens on campus.

Although Campus Police can not change the parking rules, Tate said, "Campus Police is willing to listen to ticket disagreement, and they do understand emergencies."

In regard to the escort service, campus security can provide this since they are open 24 hours each day, seven days a week. If any students feel they need protection to walk to their cars or dorms, all they have to do is call anytime.

"Although the job can be hard, we appreciate and love our work and have a special dedication to the students, faculty, and staff," Tate says.

The responsibilities of the Campus Police include reprimanding parking violators, which is performed by officer James Grubbs. (Photo by G. Edwards)

With so many hours dedicated to daytime soaps, everyone has a chance to catch their

Noontime Favorites

Finally, class is over. Time to head back to the dorm, grab a coke and relax. And watch the soaps.

Around every dorm, you'll find a group of students, mostly female, gathered every afternoon in front of a TV.

Why would anyone watch soap operas?

"Because it's interesting," said Teresa Earl, a freshman in medical technology. "They never work, never do homework, never go to school. They never do anything!"

"It keeps you in suspense," said Leigh Broussard, a freshman in radiology. "You realize what the world's like."

Melissa Hardee, a freshman in home economics gives another reason for watching soaps.

"Everybody else watches soap operas," she said. She feels that because everyone else watches them, she must also watch them "to have something to talk about." And according to Hardee, "the men are all good looking."

Earl, Broussard and Hardee are regular viewers of such soap operas as "Days of Our Lives," "Another World," "The Young and the Restless," and others. Are these three students alone in their viewing habits?

An article in USA Today (Nov. 1980, p. 38) claims an estimated 55 million Americans watch soaps. The viewers include housewives, blue-collar workers, doctors, professors, politicians, and college students. Why are soaps so popular? "The soap opera has been able to create a bond of loyalty between itself and its audience that no other programming type has been able to duplicate," said David Tucker in the USA Today article. Tucker surveyed soap opera literature for his doctor's dissertation. "The soap opera viewer not only likes television, but uses it."

A Northern Illinois University study on soap operas looked into college students as viewers. It found that as many as 40% of female students and 10% of male students are regular watchers of soaps.

"Twenty years ago, even 10 years ago, college students wouldn't have been caught dead watching soap operas," said Professor Myles Breen of Northern Illinois University in the USA Today article. "Now it happens all over. It's a nationwide phenomenon."

The study also concluded "we're into a generation of students who accept TV as part of their lives. They not only watch soap operas, but they talk about them. It gives them a topic of conversation."

However, according to a study done by Nancy Buerkel-Rogghfuss, assistant professor at Central Michigan University, soap operas may not be beneficial to college students. In a People magazine article (June 14, 1982, p. 7) she writes that college student soap viewers may overestimate the number of unfaithful spouses, abortions, and divorces in the real world. The soap opera fans may lose touch with reality.

Another study done by Dr. Kenneth Haun, a psychology professor at New Jersey's Monmouth College, came to another conclusion. In the People article, he claims that teenage viewers may use soaps as an escape. Haun feels that this isn't bad. In his study, he found that teenage soap viewers were less likely to be drug users.

Whether beneficial or harmful, the fact is that soap operas have a large and loyal following, even on college campuses. Perhaps the reason that soaps are so popular is summed up by Broussard. As she puts it, "They're just good!"

The Art of Writing

"I've been writing since high school," said Randolph Bates, "but when I was younger, I made up stories I've never written down."

Bates, who lives in New Orleans, visited the McNeese campus to meet with fiction writers in the Master of Fine Arts Program in Creative Writing; he also gave a public reading of his work.

Bates has published fiction and poetry in leading magazines, including The Southern Review, Ploughshares, Cimarron Review, and Seattle Review. He is the winner of several literary prizes, including a Division of the Fine Arts Fellowship and the Deep South Writers' competition.

"I don't think of the stories I made up when I was younger actually as writing," said Bates. "I think of them as prewriting. They were fantasies at night lying in bed, and I was always the hero. I created a world for that hero to be heroic in."

"I think that most people who end up being interested in creating art have that kind of private quality about them. They are interested in getting in touch with their imaginations, even if they aren't conscious of doing it."

Bates began considering writing seriously while in high school. "I began thinking of myself as possibly being a writer when I didn't understand a book when I read it, but I was struck by the fact that it was a kind of reality that spoke to me; I'd never seen it in the world before, and I couldn't help but be very moved by it."

When he entered college, Bates hoped to become a journalist. As time passed, however, he became increasingly interested in poetry. After taking many English courses, Bates eventually changed his major to English.

"I got a Ph.D. in English," said Bates, "for the purpose of giving myself the freedom to write. I thought if I were a professor, I'd have the time to write; I'm not sure that's so accurate."

"I think professors work harder and are busier than they're expected to be," said Bates. "So in a way, getting a Ph.D. was a kind of false trail for me."

Bates began publishing in campus literary journals while in college. To date, he has published six stories and nearly 30 poems.

Bates is presently working on a book about an actual family living in a New Orleans housing project. The book involves three generations. "If I tell it (the story) right," Bates said, "it's an important story."

The book also illustrates "that you can measure a society by the quality of its penal system. If that's the case, we live in a barbaric society in parts of the United States."

Bates currently teaches at the New Orleans Center for Creative Arts. This school, which accommodates high school students, was engineered by Tom Waylon, a former McNeese State University instructor. The school offers classes for students who want to pursue careers in the various arts.

In closing, Bates commented about the importance of poetry to a fiction writer. "I think that reading poetry and writing poetry is one of the most valuable things a fiction writer can do because it helps to put language in the center of things, and that's how it should be."

Whether she's painting, teaching or putting on an art exhibit, Heather Kelley embodies

A Certain Flair

Heather Ryan Kelley, assistant professor of art at McNeese State University, has had much of her artwork put on display at various galleries around Louisiana and in surrounding areas. Her work is contained in numerous private collections as well as in the Aaron Hastings Gallery of New Orleans and the Ruth Wiseman Gallery of Dallas.

Her handling of different media has often been described as "fresh, spontaneous, and very painterly," and her imagery has been termed "magic and dreamlike" according to Dr. Bill Bryant, head of the department of visual arts at Northwestern State University.

"As an image-maker I would most liken her to the magic-realists," added Bryant. One of Kelley's shows was at the New Orleans Contemporary Art Center's Annual "Art for Art's Sake" Exhibition.

"Art for Art's Sake" is the annual opening of the fall exhibition season in New Orleans.

Kelley's work, "Rarefied Gas" is an oil painting dealing with scientific machinery and metaphors. Bold color is utilized as well as a paint surface that varies from thin wash to an impasto build-up of pigment.

Kelley also exhibited her work in "All Dada Eve," sponsored by McNeese's art department. The international mail-art show was in display in the Student Art Gallery of the Fine Arts Building.

Over 150 works from 87 participating artists were included. The works came from across the United States as well as from France, Australia, Canada, and Belgium, said Kelley, the show's curator.

"Mail, or correspondence art, is a phenomenon of the last 20 years, in which artists correspond with each other, producing small, personal works of art," Kelly explained.

A special feature of the exhibition was Kelley's 15-foot mural, entitled "All Dada Eve," executed in acrylic and mixed-media on canvas. The canvas has life-sized figures on such famous individuals as Marilyn Monroe, Albert Einstein, Houdini, and Thomas Edison standing in a night scene. The work is painted very much in the spirit of Dadaism, complete with tricks, costumes, and fantasy.

Heather Ryan Kelley, Associate Professor of Art, puts the finishing touches on her mural entitled "All Dada Eve."

We've Got What It Takes

The opening of new buildings and the landscaping and reconstruction of the grounds are examples of the physical changes around the campus. However, these physical changes are not the only ones that have taken place at the university.

When McNeese was first launched as a junior college, it was equipped to handle only a small number of programs. Today McNeese offers its students a wide variety of programs ranging from nursing to engineering to business.

In 1985 McNeese opened the New Business Economic Center featuring the latest computers and teaching materials available, plus the administrative offices and conference facilities. With construction beginning on the third floor of the Engineering, Nursing, and Technology Building, the technology and

Colophon

The 1985 Log was published by Delmar Printing Company of Charlotte, North Carolina, under the supervision of Frank Myers, University Representative, and Sherry Breneman, In-plant Consultant. These representatives worked with a staff of 12 students and adviser, Carolyn Moffett, Coordinator of McNeese Media Services.

Endsheets were printed in 20% black over 40% black, while the pages were printed on #80 high gloss enamel paper, using helvetica 8/10 for cutlines and 10/12 for body copy. Headlines were shot in varying sizes of Garamond on an Addressograph Multigraph COMP/SET 3510. Headline sizes ranged from 36 point to 60 point, varying in sections.

Joe Jackson, an ad design student, designed the cover of Volume 42 of the Log. His cover was chosen from among 57 entries from the students of Charlene Whitney, Assistant Professor of Art. The cover consists of a black and white print of the new Business and Economics Center lithographed on a 9 x 12 paper cover dyed 300 PMS (dark blue) and printed in high gloss.

The opening, dividers, and closing of the Log were constructed on a freestyle grid, using 20% and 40% grey screens and a black hairline. The opening and the first six pages of Student Life were processed in color using chromes (slides) to attain sharp and vivid reproductions. Student Life, which encompasses activities that are an integral part of the student body, was designed on a 14 column grid. Organizations, consisting of all major associations on campus, was constructed of a six column spread, using a 20% screen to back the group shots. The Greek section was designed on a 12 column grid utilizing a hairline rule as the distinguishing factor in the section. Sports, consisting of both organized and unorganized athletic activities, was designed using an eight column spread, with a Harvard rule (the smaller of which is in a 20% screen). Academics, which emphasizes areas of McNeese that have attained excellence, was arranged on a 12 column grid. The People section was drafted on a freestyle grid to make best use of the space. Also, the People section was divided into graduates/seniors and underclassmen.

All rules and hairlines used in the yearbook were one point, except for the larger rule in the Sports section, which was in two point.

The 1985 edition of the McNeese State University Log had a press run of 3,600 copies.

engineering departments will have additional classrooms and labs.

McNeese University has grown into a college which thrives on a high quality of education. Even though McNeese already has received accreditation in a number of programs, the university is still striving to expand the variety of courses it offers to its students.

Landscaping of the courtyard outside the New Ranch (soon to be known as the Great Lawn), new sidewalks, the planting of trees and shrubs and a new underground heating and cooling system are among only a few of the other changes around the university grounds.

With pride in the rare resources McNeese offers, a multi-million dollar Recreation Complex, a new Business Economic Center, nationally ranked programs, and much more, every McNeese student can proudly proclaim: "We've got what it takes."
